Record Snowfall Paralyzes Traffic In Capital Area

Stalled Cars and Buses Clog Streets at Rush Hour's Height; Many Nearby Roads Blocked; 'Leave Cars Home,' Autoists Told

A storm riding in from the Southwest yesterday buried the Capital in a 10-inch snow, the heaviest March snowfall in 32 years.

On slippery snow-clogged streets and highways transportation was crippled throughout the Washington area, and one man left dead and scores injured as the result of automobile accidents in and near the District.

Ernest Evictoreen, 70, of Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island, N. Y., was killed at 2 p. m. when a truck and automobile collided on Route No. 1 near Accotink, Va.

Motorists, thousands of whom reached home last night only after hours of tortuous tie-ups on the streets, were warned to leave their cars at home today.

Although Washington's entire snow removal force, including 1,500 city employes, 100 snow plows and seven new tractors, was at work, the gigantic job of clearing the streets was expected to be more than one night's work.

Heaviest Since Knickerbocker Roof Caved In

Yesterday's storm, that began at 8:25 a. m., brought Washington its heaviest snow in any month since the blizzard of January, 1922, when the roof of the Knickerbocker Theater caved in. By 9:20 last night the fall had reached 10.1 inches. The Weather Bureau reported the fall then seemed to be slackening.

The previous high mark for March was set at March 4, 1909. That storm drove President Taft's Inaugural indoors. A depth of 9.8 inches was registered then.

The temperature at midnight was 29 degrees, which represented a slight rise. Continued cold, however, was forecast for today.

Washingtonians felt the full force of the storm at the rush hour. Traffic was halted completely on some hills in Washington, including Massachusetts Avenue Northwest and on Wilson Boulevard and Lee Highways in nearby Arlington.

Many Bus Riders Spend Hours Getting Home

Bus commuters reported taking two hours to reach homes in the American University areas. From 5 p. m. until 6:30 o'clock the Capital Transit Co. reported hardly a car turned a wheel between Wisconsin Avenue and M Street Northwest and New York Avenue and Fourteenth Street Northwest because automobiles were either stalled on the tracks or blocked because of traffic jams blocks ahead. At one time traffic was backed up from the Virginia side of the Francis Scott Key Bridge through the Georgetown business district.

Paul Fitzpatrick, of 1820 Clydesdale Place Northwest, described a tedious journey that took him two hours by bus and by foot to reach home from Sixth and E Streets Northwest. At Eighteenth Street and Florida Avenue Northwest, he said, the bus ran into "an unbreakable jam."

"After waiting 20 minutes for the bus to get moving," he reported, "I got out and walked the remaining half mile home."

Fitzpatrick complained there was no policeman present to break up the jam.

Thomas McMorrow, of 3500 Fourteenth Street, spent 1 hour and 45 minutes trying to taxi home from Fourteenth and E Streets Northwest to the 4800 block of Garfield Street Northwest. He never got more than half way. He said that after the driver tried various routes between Pennsylvania Avenue and Massachusetts, "he threw up his hands and gave up." McMorrow then rode back downtown.

The American Automobile Association, which increased its night staff from 4 men to 16, reported taking 10,000 telephone calls between 3 p. m. and 9 p. m.

"The calls are ranging from queries about road conditions to requests for help to pull cars out of ditches. They're coming in by the hundreds, and we're shooting garage cars out as fast as we learn they are available," said one attendant.

'Leave Your Car at Home'

The A. A. A. made reservations in a downtown hotel for its 16 night workers "so they'll be sure to get back to work in the morning."

The A. A. A. warned motorists to leave their cars at home today "except in case of emergency." Even when the snow stops, the streets will be tough going all day, drivers were told.

The Keystone Automobile Club reported that through its affiliated garages more than 100 extra mechanics were on the job last night to help on emergency calls.

"Peculiarly enough, many of our calls resulted, not from the snowy roads, but from wet ignition systems," said George E. Keneipp, director of the association. "It is unusual for a storm of this kind to be accompanied with a 'soaking' atmosphere."

Keneipp added, however, there were hundreds of requests for help to pull away from the curb, and in other predicaments resulting from motoring on snow-encrusted roads.

To take care of probable rush business for streetcars and buses, Capital Transit Co. officials last night ordered every available car out this morning. More than 1,300 streetcars and buses will be in service.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. found itself swamped with calls resulting from the storm. It called in all available operators

'Failed Completely'

Lieut. Kreml Blames Congress For District's Traffic Troubles

Death Toll Will Soar, He Fears, Unless More Patrols, Engineers Are Provided

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Washington has "failed completely" in its engineering program for traffic safety because of inadequate personnel and lack of facilities at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, in the opinion of Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, famed traffic-control authority.

Speaking last night at a Washington Post-sponsored dinner at the Willard Hotel attended by representatives of official and civic Washington, Kreml praised local enforcement of motoring laws, but said the driving public is not lending necessary support.

Money for sufficient equipment and traffic administration personnel is the city's "crying need," the young expert declared. He asserted that the District should be made a model for the country in highway safety and intimated that financial provisions to make it so should come from Capitol Hill.

As safety director for the International Association of Chiefs of Police, Kreml, a former Evanston, (Ill.,) motorcycle officer, has traveled across the country observing traffic conditions in major cities.

On the basis of Washington's ever-growing population under the national defense program, the Traffice Department, he said should have at least 33 competent engi-

Its burden lightened by directed verdicts acquitting 4 of its 24 clients, defense counsel yesterday began offering evidence upon which it depends to clear the name of organized medicine.

Neutral Stand By Yugoslavs Is Forecast

Belgrade and Axis Reported Set to Sign Nonaggression Pact

By the United Press

Belgrade, March 7.—Yugoslavia was said in highly reliable quarters tonight to have agreed to a pact of friendship and nonaggression with Adolf Hitler, which would clear the way for a German attack on Greece unless the latter capitulated to a dictated peace.

A Yugoslav-German pact will be signed ceremoniously within a few days, these quarters said, and will represent the Belgrade government's hope of a middle-course solution.

Germany was said to have suggested to Prince Regent Paul and other Yugoslav leaders a nonaggression pact as an alternative to Yugoslavia's adherence to the German-Italo-Japanese alliance in the same manner as Rumania and Bulgaria.

An accord with Germany would be over the strong protests of opposition parties, including Serbian Nationalists, who sent resolutions to Prince Paul condemning such a course.

Decline of an Empire

All of Italian Somaliland Is Captured, British Announce

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, March 7.—The final conquest of Italian Somaliland was proclaimed by British forces today, along with the capture, destruction or grounding of 12 Axis merchantmen in naval operations which knocked out the colony's two chief bases for Indian Ocean raiders—Chisimaio and Mogadiscio.

All Fascist troops who have not surrendered or fallen in combat have been run out of Somaliland and are fleeing into Ethiopia, a military spokesman declared here at British general headquarters.

He listed Italian casualties in the three-week Somaliland campaign at 21,000—including killed and prisoners—and said an area of 100,000 square miles is now under the actual occupancy of British arms.

The bulk of the Fascist force able to get away, he said, is withdrawing along the Mogadiscio road toward Jijiga in northern Ethiopia, and another retreat is proceeding from Lugh Ferrandu, in the northern Juba River Valley area of Somaliland, toward the southern Ethiopian lakes. This was one of the main routes used by Mussolini's men in the conquest of Ethiopia in 1938.

The pursuing British were declared themselves to have struck well into Ethiopia proper, where they expect to be joined by Ethiopian insurgents in a drive to dismember the colony as they tore Somaliland apart.

The Jijiga Road, the spokesman pointed out, runs close to the border of French Somaliland, and he expressed belief that the retreating Italians might seek refuge there.

Five Italian ships totaling 28,153 tons were captured and four others were scuttled when the British battle units stormed up to Chisimaio on February 15 in a coordinated at-

Nazi Press Features Hungarian Tirade Against Roosevelt

Berlin, (Saturday) March 8 (INS).—German morning papers today gave great prominence to Hungarian charges that President Roosevelt offered an American guaranty to Yugoslavia if she would refrain from joining the Axis powers.

This charge was contained in a dispatch from Washington published in the Budapest newspaper Magyarsag, it was alleged. Magyarsag's comment was:

"Roosevelt finally has dropped the mask and revealed the ultimate aim of his double-faced policy of lend-lease aid to Britain. This policy is not defensive as he tried to make the American people believe, but offensive intervention in Europe."

Senate Leaders See Passage Of 'All-Out' Aid Bill Today; Troop, Convoy Bans Defeated

Isolationists Routed in Every Effort To Write Restrictions Into Measure; Axis Finds Little Comfort in Big Votes in Support of the President

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate last night hammered down isolationist resistance to the lend-lease bill in a swift series of test votes foreshadowing passage of the "all-out" measure without hampering change.

Deep into the first night session of the year sounded roll calls that clinched for the President the aid powers he asked, and completely routed modifying moves.

The Senate recessed at 9:52 p. m. after 11 hours of continuous session without passing the bill, but leaders predicted final action today.

Just before the recess, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, presented his highly controversial amendment to prevent transfer of any part of the Navy unless it can be replaced within three months.

The amendment, which will provide one more severe test of the bill, will be the Senate's first order of business today.

The back of the opposition effort apparently was broken in the early afternoon, when five separate attempts to restrict free movement of the Nation's armed forces were overwhelmingly defeated.

The Administration Modification

In their stead, the Administration presented its own modification of the original Ellender "troop ban" amendment. It won hands down on a roll call vote, 65 to 24.

The revision provides that nothing in the bill changes existing laws governing land and naval forces, save in production and repair of defense articles and transfer of information.

Peak strength of the aid bill opposition was reached on the Norris amendment against use of armed forces to fight outside this hemisphere or United States possessions. But this was defeated 39 to 52.

Tasting victory ahead for the first time in 17 days of almost unbroken debate, leaders held the snow-bound Senate through the night's snowstorm determined to press their advantage over every unacceptable amendment effort.

Axis moves in the Balkans spurred on the drive and little comfort for Axis powers could be found in any of the day's thumping votes.

Although the five efforts to write troop and convoy restrictions into the bill tested Administration's strength, it was the roll call on their own Ellender compromise that leaders watched as an index.

The 65-to-24 vote for this amendment they regarded as indication of strength on final passage. Fifteen Republicans joined with 1 Independent and 49 Democrats in support of the Administration plan. Voting "no" were only 11 Democrats, 12 Republicans and 1 Progressive.

Would Reassure Mothers

The amendment that polled top opposition strength of the day was offered by a firm supporter of the bill—Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska. To defeat it, 4 Republicans joined with 48 Democrats. Voting for it were 14 Democrats, 23 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Independent.

Aside from the Ellender compromise, the only other change made in the bill came on motion of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, by invitation of Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It specified that the word "transfer" used in the bill applies only to transfers of title to goods and not to actual delivery of defense articles.

Leaders' only moment of uneasiness came when the veteran Norris, who supports the bill and had voted consistently against every modifying change, proposed his own declaration against use of armed forces overseas.

Norris said he wanted to provide some assurance to American mothers that their sons won't go to war. He conceded his amendment would have no legally binding effect on the President.

One by one, bill managers took the floor to contend against the change, and Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, who rarely ever speaks, supplied a dramatic moment.

"I speak," she said, "for the mothers who are not afraid. I have had letters from them from all parts of the country. I myself have two sons who are in the Army. I believe it would be much safer for them not to amend the bill or weaken it."

Fears for South America

Senator George told the Senate that efforts to restrict the free movement of troops and the Navy would "only mislead the people," and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, declared such changes would "deceive mothers into believing it can't happen, but we know that legally it can happen and it may happen."

"Nothing could be more harmful," said George. "If we want the President to try to use his powers for peace, we must leave him free to do the job and not hamstring him."

Norris himself made a plea for swift passage of the bill and warned that an Axis setback is essential to American defense. "If England defeats Hitler, the war is over," Norris said. "But if England goes down, all Europe goes under Hitler's heel."

Norris predicted that if Hitler controls Europe, he will come by the commercial route to the Western Hemisphere, and in a few years control most South American trade.

"We are going to be beaten in this race if Hitler wins in Europe," he said. "Where will we be then? We will be gone. Everything we produce will be devoted to purposes of destruction. We will kill ourselves with our own preparations. That is why it is vital for us to give all help we can to Britain."

Amendments overwhelmed in the Senate's rush toward a vote were:

By Johnson, of California—Denial of funds for payment of combatant land forces outside this hemisphere or United States territory, or funds for naval forces in combat areas. Defeated, 35 to 56.

By O'Mahoney—A prohibition on deliveries or convoying of defense articles outside North and South America and points subject to United Sofia, Bulgaria, March 7.—(The following was approved by the Bulgarian press office under a new censorship): The Germans, directing more energy than ever before toward effecting a Greek-Italian peace, are offering Greece a settlement whereby she would lose no territory held by her at the beginning of the war, it was intimated today.

Locomotives, machinery and other economic rewards are being held out to Turkey. The price is a farewell by Turkey to Great Britain.

It is quite apparent here that the Germans are counting heavily upon the success of their diplomatic plans despite repeated Greek assertions that Greece will continue to fight and despite the links with Britain that Turkey has maintained.

Doubt Greek Stand

Axis informants here declared that British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden failed to obtain from the Greeks a definite pledge to fight on and as proof of their contentions they point to the lack of specific declaration to that effect.

(Fifty words were cut out here.) This large force may not have to fight if the German diplomatic program is attained.

An informant close to Axis diplomatic quarters intimated that this diplomatic strategy, backed by German armies in Bulgaria, is to convince Greece of the futility of further fighting and to impress upon Turkey that Naxidom is supreme in southeastern Europe and that the influence of Britain has dwindled to nothing.

This informant likewise contended that Turkey still had friendly relations with Germany despite her alliance with Britain and that Turkey welcomes German economic cooperation.

Axis commentators here took the position that Yugoslavia was more or less a side issue. Perhaps—this was their expressed view—she too would join the Axis, and if not the tide of German influence in this

Jim Wasn't Raised To Be a Soldier

Miami Beach, Fla., March 7 (AP). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today she was afraid her son Jimmy wasn't especially apt in mjlitary work.

Jimmy, she said, worked up to a captain's rank in the Marines and was made a lieutenant colonel to permit him to serve as the President's aide.

"It was ridiculous," Mrs. Roosevelt laughed. "Jimmy realized he wasn't properly trained for the rank, and soon asked for a demotion. Why, in one drill I saw him march his men straight into a wall."

Steel, Coal Mediation Is Forecast

Speedy Adoption To Solve Defense Strikes Expected

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Federal labor officials, seriously concerned at threats of major strikes in the steel and coal industries and the Ford Motor Co. plants, forecast speedy establishment of a defense mediation board along lines discussed yesterday by President Roosevelt at his press conference.

They pointed out that for the last 20 years Presidential intervention has usually been necessary to settle the spring contracts in the coal fields, and that the Ford and steel situations now appeared to threaten disputes probably not susceptible of settlement except at the hands of a Federal board. The President's disclosure that he was considering establishment of an overall mediation body indicated, they said, that it might be substituted for a series of specific mediation boards created frequently in the past to handle individual strikes.

Still a Generality

In noting that he was considering the project, Mr. Roosevelt stated that the agency would be not merely a revival of the old Taft-Walsh board of World War I, the duties of which were almost exclusively mediatory, but that it would consider broader problems of labor, production and postemergency reallocations. He warned reporters, however, that no specific details could be written about the contemplated board at this time. He suggested that it be left as a glittering generality because its scope might include regional problems, industry problems, cost of living questions and many others of a broad and long-range nature.

Condemns Dayton Strike

Although the President continued to minimize strike effects and defended the accuracy of a previous estimate that only one-fourth of one per cent of defense production was impaired by strikes, he was forthright in denouncing for the first time jurisdictional strikes in defense fields.

Declaring himself absolutely in favor of eliminating jurisdictional disputes, he added that he did not think the Nation could approve in any shape, way or form a jurisdictional strike like that now in

A Herd of Trojan Horses

Dies Says He Has Uncovered Pro-Nazi Soceity of Million

Chairman Dies of the Committee on un-American Activities told the House yesterday that there exists in the United States an organization—which he did not name—of 1,000,000 members, which is "pro-Hitler in every respect" and is promoting "Nazi ideology" in this country.

Referring to a number of organizations which his committee was planning to investigate, the Texas Representative said several groups were "exploiting the word 'Peace'." Without mentioning any names, he said some had officers and directors who are Communists, and one was "dominated" by people who are "definitely in sympathy with Naziism."

Still another organization composed "entirely" of Germans who believe in Naziism, said Dies, has 1,000 members in one city, all of whom hold "key positions in industries that are vital to our national defense."

And another organization that is "rapidly growing in certain sections" is "spreading racial hatred" and using propaganda "imported from Germany," said Dies. He also noted that 10 C. I. O. unions "have Communists entrenched in positions of leadership."

The pro-Hitler organization that has "approximately 1,000,000 members throughout the United States" is serving as "a window-dressing for espionage and sabotage," Dies declared. He said his committee had "recently obtained minutes of this organization, written in German, and also a partial membership list."

Speaking on an appropriation bill that would give the FBI 500 additional agents for national defense activities, Dies said he intended to ask the Department of Justice to

Over Our Shoulder

a preview of the Sunday Post

HAVE YOU noticed what a good job has been done with the Sunday Post rotogravure section since it was renamed "Pictures" and dedicated to the picture-magazine, story-telling idea?

Take tomorrow's "Pictures" as an example. It's full of human interest, good photography, a wide variety of subjects, with a complete picture-story on every page.

Masterpieces from the Mellon and Kress collections in the soon-to-be-opened National Gallery of Art adorn the opening page. (And you'll find still more reproductions of famous paintings in the Local News section, with Eddie Folliard's story about the National Gallery.)

Meet a minister's family on page 5—Dr. and Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn and their three children. (Dr. Glenn is rector of St. John's Church.) An intimate introduction to a busy and charming family.

The picture-story of Boom Town Washington appears on page 7. And page 8 shows a world in arms in terms of men—typical soldiers of England, Australia, Germany, Japan, Scotland, Russia and the United States, and some "Free French" sailors.

When Errol Flynn gets through with that Sherlock Holmes cap in the Post roto, he can pick up a doctor's bag and step right into Sunday's complete novel. It was written to order for him to play the hero! Judge for yourself:

Fending cattle outfits. Men ambushed and killed. The range set afire. The ranch owner's daughter carried off by masked riders. And a young doctor who tries to solve the mystery in spite of threats and danger.

That's "Doctor of the Desolate Range," the Sunday Post novel. After you read it, let us know whom you'd cast for the Dr. Prescott part.

While on the subject of movies—Hedda Hopper has an inspiring column Sunday on how a poverty-stricken Sicilian lad worked himself up through Cal Tech and the early days of custard pie movies into a spot of top rank in Hollywood: Frank Capra. And there's a less inspiring—but amusing story—of Hollywood and its income tax exemption squirmings.

As the Senate recessed, Majority Leader Barklay indicated he would ask the Senate on convening today to agree to a debate limitation assuring passage of the bill tonight.

Will Oppose Time Limit

The motion requires unanimous consent, and opposition leaders reiterated they will oppose any set time limitation.

Yesterday's progress was so great that bill managers, who Thursday were predicting passage next week, raised hope of action last night.

But a glacier of amendments still remained undisposed of at the recess hour.

Time and again, after the Senate assembled at 11 a. m., opponents of the bill and those supporters seeking troop and convoy restrictions, teamed up in variations of the Ellender amendment designed to get a policy declaration against use of troops or the Navy overseas.

First test was due to come on an amendment by Clark denying funds for such use, but the Missouri Democrat withdrew his motion in favor of a tighter amendment by Johnson, of California.

Crushed, 63 to 28

Withdrawal by Clark left a convoy restriction by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, free for the first record vote on the bill.

O'Mahoney's amendment forbade delivery of defense articles by land, sea or air forces except at points in or adjacent to the Americas.

Although O'Mahoney supports the bill, opposition leaders considered it a strong opening amendment. It was crushed, 28 to 63, foreshadowing failure of every succeeding modification effort.

Johnson's attempt to deny funds for combat zone travel or troops overseas provided an opposition rallying point.

The white-haired Californian recited campaign pledges against use of troops abroad and exhorted the Senate:

"Be men! Keep your pledges!"

But when Johnson said a vote against his amendment was a vote to send men overseas, Barkley took sharp exception.

The roll call on this amendment showed 12 Democrats, 22 Republicans and 1 Progressive voting for it, and 50 Democrats, 5 Republicans and 1 Independent voting "no."

part of the world would bring her into line later.

The Germans also say they are inclined to discount the Soviet note to Bulgaria. (This was a statement of disapproval at Bulgaria's allowing Nazi troops to come in.)

Russia, they say, always had a following in Bulgaria and therefore it was "natural for the Soviet to say something for the benefit of the Bulgarian people."

One Axis commentator remarked: "We do not regard the note as of serious import insofar as international policy is concerned."

Earlier, some neutral military observers in Sofia predicted a German attack on Greek Macedonia and Thrace within 48 hours.

German troops in occupied Bulgaria, the base for the expected assault, were said by some quarters here to stand more than 150,000 strong along the Greek and Turkish frontiers, and German officers seized the available ransport of this country to move up their ever-lengthening columns of men and machines.

The Greeks, having gone far toward winning a war with Italy, and now faced with a vastly more powerful antagonist in the Nazis, nevertheless seemed prepared to take their chances.

The Greek army, said Grecian diplomatic informants here, "obsolutely will fight any German invasion."

They added that they had hopes that the Turks would smash at the Nazi flank through the Rhodope Mountains, which extend east and west along the Greek-Bulgarian frontier.

The Greeks were reported removing civilians from western Thrace. But they sent new troops and artillery to support their naturally strong positions along the Struma River—which runs north and south from the Bulgarian border to the Aegean Sea in that area, and there, in a sector some 25 miles wide, it appeared that they would take their stand. Western Thrace adjoins European Turkey.

For reasons of grand strategy, much depended immediately on the attitude of Yugoslavia and on Turkey.

Yugoslavia, the last remaining Balkan power not flatly committed to either Britain or Germany, was under enormous pressure—by the British to keep neutral, by the Germans to join the Axis. The general expectation was that she would shortly proclaim friendship with Germany and Italy but one not so close as to imperil her neutrality.

This belief was supported by reports that Yugoslav Regent Prince Paul had conferred with Adolf Hitler last Monday at Berchtesgaden and had returned to Belgrade only yesterday.

The three Yugoslav opposition parties, Democratic, Radical and Nationalist, meantime were demanding that the government stand firmly against any Axis demands.

The German Minister to Yugoslavia, Viktor von Heeren, called upon Foreign Minister Cincar-Markovic at the latter's request during the day, and there were hints that Cincar Markovic had handed the envoy the draft of a public declaration for transmission to Berlin, prior to its issuance here.

As to Turkey, Britain's nonbelligerent ally, there still was no official word from her leaders as to what she would do if the Germans go forward with their apparent plan to smash Greece.

Nevertheless, newspapers inspired by the Turkish government, declaring a big-scale war in the Balkans seemed inevitable, took a strongly belligerent tone.

"Aganist a handful of birdshot reassurances that the Axis has flung at us," said the newspaper Demokrat Politika, "stand 2,000,000 Turkish bayonets!"

"If Germany comes this way, she will get such an answer as she never got before."

The newspaper Vatan: "If Germany attacks the Balkans she will see the end of her terrorism and the 'new order' will indeed be installed in the world, but it will be a new order depending on respect of liberty for all."

A criticism of the Soviet Russian attitude—significant because it was the first so publicly uttered—was offered by the newspaper Tasviri Efkar.

"The whole Balkan situation," the paper said, "can be laid at Russia's door. If Russia had not taken Bessarabia, Rumania would not have been frightened and would not have allowed Germany to enter."

U. S. May Give Naval Units To Britain

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

A member of the Navy high command informed Congress yesterday that some proposed naval cargo ships, tankers and other auxiliary craft might be turned over to Great Britain under the lend-lease program.

Testifying before the House Naval Affairs Committee on a bill to authorize the construction or acquisition of 200,000 tons of such ships for the Navy, Rear Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, assistant chief of naval operations, said there was a possibility some of the craft might go to the British.

He added emphatically, however, that there has been no definite allocation of any of the proposed ships.

Robinson Questioned

Another ranking naval official—Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships—however, told the committee that the request for the ships had "nothing whatever to do" with the lend-lease program, and had been prepared long before the British aid bill was submitted to Congress.

"The ships are asked for the United States Navy," he insisted.

Robinson declared that the contemplated 200,000 additional tons of auxiliary ships "would not begin to meet" the Navy's requirements if the nation got into war. The proposed program will not even meet contemplated future needs of the Fleet, he stated.

Chairman Vinson raised the question as Admiral Ingersoll began a statement in support of the bill.

"Let's put the cards on the table, admiral," he stated. "Is this 200,000 tons needed for the maintenance of our fleet, or is part of it for the lend-lease program?"

No Definite Allocation

Ingersoll said there had been no definite allocation of the ships, and added:

"We might use part of it that way."

He said the Navy could not foresee what it may be required to do during the next year. Stressing the need for passing the bill, the admiral declared that there was not a single mine-layer in the Atlantic, and that while three ships of this type were being built, they would not be completed for two or three years.

"If by any possible chance we were directed to turn over all our tankers to some foreign nation," he said, "we would have to get more tankers from the Maritime Commission and we have neither the money nor the authority to do so now."

The committee deferred action on the bill in order to question Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, on the point. He is due to return from an inspection of the Atlantic fleet next week.

Deficiency Bill Passed

In another defense development, the House passed a $188,963,963 deficiency appropriation bill, carrying funds for national defense.

Included was $75,000,000 to pay for the remainder of the defense housing program started last year, and $22,500,000 for carrying on the NYA program for training workers for arms industries.

cooperate with his committee in investigating organizations "that are serving foreign powers in America." Dies and the department have frequently been at odds over the question of tracking down subversive activities.

"One of the alarming symptoms of the times," said the Texan, "is the general disrespect shown for the Congress of the United States by the bureaus and agencies of the executive departments."

Decrying this "unwholesome condition," Dies said that "there are some of these bureaus that do not want to cooperate with Congressional committees and agencies."

Dies warned that "if we are unable to obtain this cooperation" from the Justice and other departments, "I propose to come before the House and give you the facts."

Asked About Rehirings

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, asked him if it were true that "a great number of employes in a particular agency of the Government were discharged by reason of their membership in certain subversive groups" and subsequently "have nearly all been placed back on the pay roll of the Government."

"That is what our investigators report," said Dies.

Noting that 700 Government employes belonged to the now-defunct American League for Peace and Democracy which "was dominated by the Communist party," Dies said that a number of them "immediately joined another organization with a similar membership and the same objective."

He insisted that his committee does not propose to investigate the organization because it believes in peace and opposes the aid-to-Britain bill, but because it is "controlled by a foreign government."

Dies said that some persons who hold "high positions" in the United States Government "own Soviet bonds and draw interest from the Soviet Government."

First Lady Shares Alarm

Miami, Fla., March 7.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today she thought Representative Dies' alarm over fifth column activities in South America was justified.

"Yes, I do," the President's wife said in answer to a direct question at a press conference.

She declined to amplify her reply, but did say there was no question that, as a result of the European war, there would be a closer relationship between the Americas.

"And it certainly should come as much through our efforts as theirs," she declared. "I think one of the most important things we can do as individuals is to study Spanish."

Lawyers Need Not Be Fools, SEC Insists

The Securities and Exchange Commission had what it hoped was the last word yesterday in a "'tis—'t'ain't" battle of words with the New York Stock Exchange over whether SEC commissioners are "ignorant."

The scrap began Wednesday when William C. Martin, jr., president of the "big board," said in his valedictory address before he leaves for induction into the Army that SEC commissioners are "men of good will but they are ignorant."

He said the SEC had "no fundamental concept of the broad picture of a market." He was disdainful of the SEC's practice of appointing numerous lawyers to its staff.

Yesterday the SEC issued a formal statement the burden of which was that SEC commissioners are not ignorant and anyone who says they are is a president of the New York Stock Exchange.

The dignified statement pointed out gravely that three SEC commissioners are members of the bar with experience in corporation law and that two are experts in the fields of economics and business.

"It had never occurred to us that such experience was, as Mr. Martin suggests, the highway to ignorance," the statement said.

Harriman Gets Credentials For British Job

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

W. Averell Harriman, destined to become the "production line Pershing" of the second World War, received parting instructions from President Roosevelt yesterday before leaving for London to expedite lend-lease aid to Britain.

Anticipating early passage of the aid-Britain measure, President Roosevelt called Harriman to the White House for a long luncheon conference.

Mr. Roosevelt armed the 49-year-old railroad executive with letters authorizing Harriman to "act as my personal representative . . . in regard to all matters relating to the facilitation of material aid to the British Empire."

Will Take Clipper Monday

Harriman, chairman of the Union Pacific Railway, who has been serving with the Defense Commission, planned to leave for London, via Lisbon, by clipper next Monday.

Stephen Early, White House press secretary who read excerpts from the letters of introduction, said two equipment experts would leave for London shortly to join what he termed the "Harriman mission."

They are Edward P. Warner of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, whom Early described as an authority on airplanes, including production and design, and Col. Allen George Green, vice president of the Yellow Coach & Manufacturing Co. and vice chairman of the Ordnance Advisory Committee of the War Department.

When President Roosevelt announced the appointment of Harriman last month he did not clarify the relationship that Harriman will bear to Ambassador John G. Winant.

It has been made plain by Winant's statements and by other officials, however, that Winant is to be an envoy of "peace," who will keep his eyes on the post-war horizon.

Harriman, on the other hand, is an envoy of "war" whose gigantic task it is to handle the London end of the great flood of goods that the United States is preparing to lend and lease.

Harriman's task has been described as one of "translation," that is, translating British needs into production blueprints for American industry and, on the other hand, explaining to the British the limitations of America's industrial machine.

A versatile businessman of broad experience, Harriman is a banker, a shipbuilder, a steamship operator, a patron of art, a poker player, a railroad tycoon, an eight-goal polo player, a Government executive, a civic planner, purchasing technician and croquet maestro. He is a director of dozens of corporations.

Early New Dealer

Harriman was one of the first businessmen to take an active part in the New Deal. He came to Washington as a member of former Commerce Secretary Daniel Roper's Business Advisory Council, served through the hectic NRA days and stayed on to become a keystone of the national defense effort, serving the OPM.

Harriman has operated in half a dozen capacities in the defense commission and has been in charge of the industrial materials division of the OPM production division.

In effect, Harriman is expected to to be a general in the field for American industry. He may do the same kind of job for material aid to Britain in this war that Gen. John J. Pershing did in supplying, coordinating and directing American man power to aid the Allies during the first World War.

Enameled figures of the Greek Evzones, to be worn on the lapel or carried on brooches and compacts, will be featured today in a sale for the benefit of Greek war relief at 1018 Connecticut Avenue.

Available to purchasers will be several shawls, designed and donated by the Grand Duchess Marie, of Russia, a cousin of King George of Greece. The Grand Duchess was in Washington yesterday, a guest of the Greek Legation. She assisted in planning for the sale, which will continue through next Saturday.

The British War Relief Society will share its headquarters at 1018 Connecticut Avenue with the Greek relief society during the week of the sale.

British, Banning Cereal, Keep Curbs on U. S. Food for France

By the Associated Press

The British government, blocking a shipment of cereal, has decided against any further relaxation of the blockade on American food supplies for unoccupied France, it was learned yesterday.

An effort by the American Red Cross to include 300 tons of oatmeal in a cargo of evaporated milk, children's clothing and medicines met with a refusal of British authorities to expand the scope of the existing agreement on French food supplies.

The decision apparently doomed the efforts of the French government to have frozen French assets in the United States released for the purchase of wheat here to relieve the bread shortage in France.

Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador, described the British attitude as "a dreadful policy" and asked Secretary Hull to intervene with British officials.

Hull later talked with Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, but said he would discuss the question with Chairman Norman Davis of the Red Cross before taking it up in detail with the British.

Davis explained that the agreement with the British government provided only for the shipment to France of milk, clothing and vitamin concentrates for children.

The American export liner Exmouth is now being loaded at Jersey City, N. J., and is due to sail next week for Marseille with the second Red Cross cargo of children's supplies for unoccupied France.

130,000 Refugees Reported in U. S.

New York, March 7 (AP).—The National Refugee Service estimates that there are approximately 130,000 European refugees in the United States and that about one-half of them are living in New York City, with most of the others scattered in Chicago, St. Louis, Washington, Boston and San Francisco. Almost 100,000, it says, are Jews.

George L. Warren, executive secretary of the President's advisory committee on political refugees, said many refugees had created new industries, providing jobs in many cases for Americans. The service reported that two sample surveys showed 44,000 Americans were working in industries set up by refugees.

Man Killed, Scores Hurt On Icy Roads

One man was killed and scores were injured yesterday on snow-bound highways in and near the District, while police were kept busy with countless mishaps, many of which meant nothing more than bent fenders.

Ernest Evictoreen, 70, of Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island, N. Y., was killed at about 2 p. m., when a truck and automobile collided on route No. 1 near Accotink. Fairfax police reported that the truck, driven by Joseph Taylor, of Richmond, Va., went out of control on an icy hill.

Richard George Neibert, 18, a stone setter, of 213 Ninth Street Southwest, died at the Frederick City (Md.) Hospital after his car collided with a truck on route 240 near Frederick. Neibert, employed at Fort Meade until two weeks ago, was en route to Washington after visiting his mother, Mrs. Hattie Neibert, friends here said.

Injured in the Accotink accident was Evictoreen's wife, Ann, 60, who was taken to the Alexandria Hospital with a fractured skull. Her husband's body was taken to Demaine's funeral home in Alexandria. Taylor was held in $500 bond by Fairfax police.

Washington Policeman Charles E. Riley, 37, of Arlington, Va., a radio dispatcher, suffered injuries to his abdomen in a skidding two-car crash at Fifth and D Streets Southeast. Riley was taken to Casualty Hospital. Police charged the driver of the second car, Edward Crosthwait, 50, of 1445 East Capitol Street, with failing to yield the right of way.

John H. Mill, 46, 451 East Capitol Street, suffered hip and rib injuries when his car skidded through a stop sign at Third and E Streets Northwest, and collided with a truck. He went to Casualty Hospital.

Four persons were injured, three of them seriously, when two cars collided at the intersection of Philadelphia Avenue and Piney Branch Road, Takoma Park, Md.

At the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park, the injured were listed as:

Benjamin Steckney, 70, of 1432 Madison Street Northwest, brain concussion, cuts and bruises.

His daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lena Steckney, 28, of the same address, fractured left leg and puncture wound of left eye.

Samuel Bradley, 22, of 8205 Fenton Street, Silver Spring, Md., a lieutenant in the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department Rescue Squad, minor cuts and bruises.

His wife, Mrs. Ella Bradley, 19, fractured pelvis and possible internal injuries.

According to Takoma Park police, Stickney was driving his car north on Piney Branch Road and collided with the Bradley auto travelling east on Philadelphia Avenue. The Bradley car, it was reported, was thrown 40 feet and overturned. Bradley was thrown clear, but his wife was pinned in the wreckage.

Passerbys raised the car from her body and the injured were taken to the sanitarium by the Takoma Park and Silver Spring rescue squads.

Henry C. West, 32, of 308 E Street Southeast, suffered chest injuries when his car skidded and crashed against a post on the New Jersey Avenue Bridge at I Street Southeast. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

Nathan R. Wolfsheimer, 37, of Baltimore, was treated at Walter Reed Hospital for minor injuries after his car ran into a light pole in the 6900 block of Georgia Avenue Northwest.

Everhard H. Hughs, 18, of 37 R Street Northwest, received treatment for minor injuries at Casualty Hospital after his car collided with a streetcar at Ninth and C Streets Northeast.

Truck Driver Held

Prince Georges County police placed a technical charge of reckless driving against the driver of an interstate truck following a collision on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard near University Park in which the driver of a smaller truck was injured yesterday afternoon.

Fields Hash, of Beltsville, an employe of the American Gas Service Co. of Beltsville, was treated by Dr. Martin Keane for shoulder injuries and shock and later taken to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad after his truck had skidded into the path of the one operated by John Franklin Davis, of Charlotte, N. C., which was coming down a steep grade.

Police said that the accident was apparently unavoidable but charged Davis with reckless driving pending the outcome of Hash's injuries. Reports from the hospital indicated that the injuries were of a minor nature.

to handle its heaviest load of the winter. Hotel accommodations were made for the operators to save them arduous trips to and from home.

Conditions within a 200-mile radius of Washington were no better than here. Both the American Automobile Association and the Keystone Automobile Club urged motorists to give up prospective trips in any direction. Vehicles, particularly buses and trucks, were stalled on the Washington-Baltimore Highway, halting all traffic until rescue cars arrived. Driving over mountainous passages was reported an "absolute impossibility."

Out-of-town buses were running between one and three hours behind schedule, officials here said. Trains in and out of Washington were behind and held down to 12-car sections to insure adequate heating.

Planes Grounded Here

All planes were grounded at Washington Airport. A study of weather reports there led to a belief that New York planes may resume service at 11 a. m. today, while southbound ships will be able to fly at noon.

Employes in several Government agencies, including the Interior Department and the Farm Credit Administration, were permitted to leave work early yesterday afternoon. There was no indication last night, however, that departments would not be operating regularly today.

Arlington County officials had sand spread on Wilson Boulevard and Lee Highway late in the afternoon as traffic became clogged on slippery hills on those roads. In Fairfax County traffic proceeded slowly on Lee Highway and Jackson Boulevard.

Montgomery County, Md., snow plows last night were bucking one of the heaviest snows in the history of the county in an effort to keep open its main highways. All available county snow plows were at work aiding Maryland State Roads Commission plows.

Side Roads Drifted Shut

Many side roads of the county were almost impassable last night as the snow was whipped into deep drifts by winds. County roads were lined with abandoned vehicles and garages and service stations were working at full capacity in an effort to keep up with the frantic calls for assistance from snowbound motorists.

Park Police last night closed all hilly roads in Rock Creek Park. This left open only the main drives, including Military Road, Rock Creek Drive, Beach Drive and Cathedral Avenue. Closed were Piney Branch Road, Sherrill Drive, Glover Road, Grand Road, Ross Drive, Joyce Road and Morrow Road.

City streets blocked off were: Thirty-fourth Street between M and Prospect Streets Northwest; Fifteenth Street, between Florida and Chapin Streets Northwest, and Thirteenth Street between Florida and Clifton Streets Northwest.

100 Plows Ordered Out

William A. Xanten, director of the District refuse department, led the city's street-clearing mobilization. The 100 snow plows ordered out were 40 more than have ever been used before. They were to be in action through the night, while trucks were to start hauling the piles of snow away at 5 a. m. Included in the equipment were seven new tractor truck-plow combinations, Xanten said.

The blizzard swept many Eastern States, causing some weather officials to predict the greatest snowfall of the winter in many areas. A swirling low pressure area was working its way up from the South. The disturbance, of wide extent and considerable intensity, had two centers—one over South Carolina and the other over southeast Alabama—and gales were predicted between Cape Hatteras and Block Island, Rhode Island, today.

New York, Hartford, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Cincinnati were among the larger cities reporting snow which gave every indication of continuing throughout the night.

Snow Expected To Set March Record in City

Snowfall in the District yesterday and today was expected to be the heaviest snowfall on record for March but far short of the winter record for the city, the Weather Bureau said.

Taft's inauguration storm, March 4, 1909, spilled 9.8 inches of snow on Washington. Weather officials said, however, that in the 1909 storm the snow melted fast, and its greatest depth on the ground was about 5 inches. Yesterday's storm had passed the latter mark with 5½ inches on the ground at 6 p. m.

Temperatures fell from about 36 early yesterday, to hover around 28 throughout the storm. The mercury was expected to stay near this mark until the storm ends today, the bureau said.

Washington's greatest recorded depths was in the blizzard that came in 1899, when 20½ inches fell from February 11 to February 13, on top of 14 inches already on the ground.

The 24-hour record was set January 27-28, 1922, the day of the Knickerbocker Theater disaster, when 25 inches fell in 24 hours, with the total fall for a 36-hour storm of 28 inches.

11 D.C. Streets Blocked Off For Sledding

Police last night barred traffic from 11 District streets so that Washington youngsters could coast on sleds without interference.

Usually 60 to 80 streets are set aside for children, but police said they lacked sufficient personnel to supervise the highways. Others will be opened to the children today as soon as men are available.

Streets closed by police for coasting were:

Piney Branch Road Northwest, from Decatur to Buchanan.

First Street Northwest, Emerson to Gallatin.

Brandywine Street Northwest, River Road to Forty-fifth Street.

Eighth Street Northwest, Randolph Street to Shepherd Street.

High Street Southeast, Mount View Street to W Street.

Montana Avenue Northeast, Eighteenth Street to near Bladensburg Road.

Twentieth Street Northwest, Kalorama Road to Belmont Street.

Linnean Avenue Northwest, Ellicott Street to Broad Branch Road.

3 British Ships In Mediterranean Hit, Says Rome

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 7.—The Italian air force struck at "a strongly protected" British convoy in the eastern Mediterranean and "hit one cruiser, one torpedo boat and a merchantman," it was stated in today's war bulletin.

Italian circles indicated that the convoy may have been taking troops and material to Greece, while Virginio Gayda frankly announced that "new British reinforcements are about to arrive on Greek territory despite the denials of the Greek and British radios."

Two British divisions are already in Greece, he asserts, and at least 15,000 British specialized troops are on the Greek mainland. A British division, he adds, is also concentrated in Cyprus.

Berlin, March 7 (INS).—Germany announced tonight that two merchant ships "loaded with American war materials" bound for England, were torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic today by Nazi submarines.

This made four armed freighters reported sunk by German U-boats in the last two days.

The ships torpedoed west of the Irish coast today were idetnified as the 7,939-ton British freighter Politician and the 3,388-ton Canadian vessel Maplecourt, it was claimed.

Severn Swept For Two Boys Missing in Storm

Annapolis, Md., March 7 (AP).—Boats from the Naval Academy searched the Severn River tonight for two boys who were swept out from Round Bay in a small open boat in a raging snowstorm.

John Bromley, Anne Arundel County roads engineer, said the missing boys were Ned Chambers, 12, and Ray Cunningham, also 12. The Chambers boy is the stepson of Gilbert Kanour, Baltimore Evening Sun theater critic.

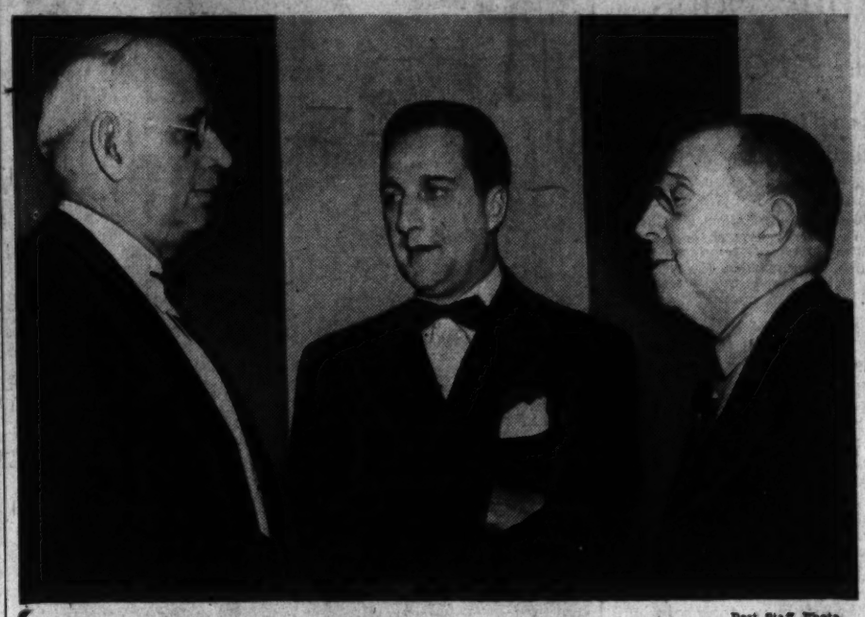

There were conflicting reports that a third youth, Jerry Almond, 16, who started out after the two, was missing.

Bromley said the boys' boat was believed to have drifted toward Herald Harbor, across Round Bay, and it was in that vicinity that a motor launch and a speedboat from the Naval Academy were centering their search.

The boys were said to have oars in the boat.

Bromley said a third youth, Jerry Almond, 16, who had started out in another boat to look for the boys, was safe on shore.

neers. He pointed out that the present number is only 17 and "doesn't stack up at all with cities which have made real progress in safety."

Although lauding enforcement, Kreml told his audience of judges, Congressional, municipal and civic leaders that the Metropolitan Police Department must, "in the interest of proper administration," increase its motorcycle patrol to 92 men. The department now has 56 officers assigned to full-time duty.

Blames Congress

Again, while praising leadership in the Police and Traffic Departments, Kreml struck at failure of Congress to provide adequate manpower and equipment for both units.

In strong terms, he advocated a separate Traffic Court for the trial of all motoring cases.

"In the last analysis," said Kreml, "any program—be it the control of crime or traffic—depends on the quality and effectiveness of the courts."

He assailed the system of rotating judges here by comparing it with similar systems which have "never worked" in other jurisdictions. He said the separate traffic court with full-time judge is "not only desirable but necessary" to efficient traffic control.

He pointed out that a traffic court which varies its penalties—and he spoke of a recent study which revealed a 100 per cent variance in average fines between two different judges—loses public respect.

Urges "Propaganda" Program

"Any court," Kreml declared, "which fails to uphold efficiently law enforcement will receive nothing but disrespect from the public."

He urged Washington traffic authorities to initiate a program of "propaganda" to promote greater understanding and respect for driving regulations.

"You can't hammer too hard on the subject," said the speaker, "and I suggest such propaganda begin at once."

He further proposed that the "propaganda" program be started in the public schools—in the elementary courses to stress proper walking habits and the secondary classes with young drivers to stress motoring manners.

Both in traffic control administration and public education, Kreml said, the problem must be approached on the basis of conditions particularly pertaining to that city. He added that to a large extent that had not been done in Washington.

In discussing the city's traffic educational program, Kreml said The Washington Post "in particular" had done a "splendid job." But, he added, more persons must participate and more persons must listen to the theories advanced.

If Washington is to top the list of cities in its population group this year as it did last, there must be a general public awakening to the vital problem of saving lives, Kreml asserted.

He said the situation in the District is gradually going to get worse unless something "is done now" to provide necessary remedies.

"The accident and fatality record in Washington is going sky high unless you reinforce to prevent it," Kreml warned. "You have a tough problem," he continued, "and to beat it will not only be a proof of good administration, but a good test of democracy."

Touching on the national traffic picture, Kreml reluctantly predicted that the 1940 traffic toll across the nation would reach 35,000 deaths, 1,500,000 injuries and between $1,000,000 and $2,500,000 in property damage.

"It is a real problem," he said, "and represents economic waste, social maladjustment and inefficiency. We have enough troubles at present to add these burdens to our national life."

Can Be Controlled

Causes of accidents can be determined and when the causes are known they can be controlled, Kreml declared, basing his assertion on nearly 17 years of experience in accident-prevention work.

Kreml was introduced at the dinner by Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, who invited him here from Northwestern University where he is director of the traffic safety institute.

In his remarks, Meyer told of The Post's past interest in local traffic control and pledged the paper to future work in this field—"as long

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 7.—The heaviest snow of the winter left camp roads all but impassable by tonight and brought outdoor activities to a standstill.

The infantry and artillery regiments, which had been drilling and maneuvering outdoors during the mild weather that had prevailed all week, were driven into their barracks and to the "inclement weather" schedule of lectures and other indoor instruction.

So deep were the roads in snow and so slippery that Gen. Reckord refused permission for Army trucks to take men into Baltimore tonight for the annual University of Maryland Fifth Regiment indoor track meet at the armory.

An athletic carnival scheduled to be held in camp tomorrow and Sunday has been postponed at least a week.

A large number of men are obtaining weekend leave, and a special train from Fort Meade to Richmond, Va., will be run as will special coaches to Pittsburgh.

Two civilian fliers were forced down on the landing field here today while en route from Newark, N. J., to Atlanta, Ga., in a two-cabin monoplane. They landed without damage to themselves or their plane. They blamed a frozen carburetor for the mishap. They were Weldon F. Schanz, 33, of Atlanta, and August Comenzo, 42, of New York.

Men—Don't Slosh, Get a Galosh, now—Today

'Adam Had Four Sons' And Plenty of Problems

New Picture, at Earle, Is a Tightly Woven Drama of Domestic Difficulties, Ably Acted; Stage Bill Introduces the 'New Stars of 1941'

"ADAM HAD FOUR SONS." Columbia picturization of Charles Bonner's novel of "Legacy," costarring Warner Baxter and Ingrid Bergman, with Susan Hayward, Fay Wray, Richard Denning, Johnny Downs, Robert Shaw, Charles Lind, Billy Ray, Steven Muller, Wallace Chadwell, Bobby Walberg and Helen Westley. Directed by Gregory Ratoff. At the Earle Theater.

IN HIS MAIDEN EFFORT as a motion picture producer, the youthful Robert C. Sherwood, celebrated in these pages a day or two ago, has sunk his teeth into some pretty strong meat.

"Adam Had Four Sons," presented yesterday for the first time on a local screen at the Earle Theater, is a domestic drama covering a span of years that encompass many disruptive elements. There is little of the flavor of the idyllic comedy-dramas based on the lives of the four Lemp girls—who have been daughters, wives, mothers and whatnot in the Warner series—nor yet of the war-tortured "Four Sons" in this one. The new Columbia release is not too grim or tragic, but it does deal with family problems that are a bit terse in their implications and tense in the manner of their solution.

BELL

Adam Stoddard had four sons, a wife, a governess and a fortune. That was back about the year 1907. He lost his wife and his fortune, one of his sons married a chased young woman, who was something less than chaste, and the failure of the family bank account necessitated the departure of the governess.

Coming down to 1917, when war was something more than merely in the air, the married son has gone into the army and his older brother has gone into the predatory arms of his bride. But the Stoddard fortunes manage to be restored, the governess returns to the household and a few "sacred secrets" are betrayed in the family circle. There is a suicide as an inevitable consequence of it all and all manner of filial conflicts developed as the thing goes along. How it all comes out is to be seen and not disastrously disclosed in advance.

This much may be disclosed. Robert C. Sherwood has every right to be proud of his first production. It has been staged with impressive completeness and cast with a fine eye to talent and "type." It brings back to their former positions of eminence, after long absences from the screen, such reliables of the cinema's acting forces as Warner Baxter, Ingrid Bergman, Fay Wray and Helen Westley. Mr. Baxter offers a performance, as the pater of the title, that will occasion no reminder of the Cisco Kid and Miss Bergman, as the recurrent governess, perpetuates the enthusiasm aroused by her performance in "Intermezzo—a Love Story," her only previous vehicle on the American screen. Susan Hayward is the wanton wife and the four sons, two of whom fall under her spell, are played by Richard Denning, Johnny Downs, Robert Shaw and Charles Lind. Gregory Ratoff, in his direction, has been guilty of no lost motion.

There is another screen item of note on the new bill at the Earle this week. It is one of the Warner Brothers' contributions to the current trend of national events, bearing the title of "Meet the Fleet." It is, of course, fundamentally Government propaganda, but it is propaganda so cleverly disguised as entertainment that it has a rightful place on any amusement bill. It has been adroitly cast and photographed—as most of these patriotic Warner subjects are—in highly inspiring Technicolor.

On the stage, Producer-Director Harry Anger trots out the "New Stars of 1941." As time and space grow short, it will suffice to say that they include Olson and Shirley, Jeanne Brideson, The Vikings and Mary Dooley, Ferdinand, the Bull, who will have to hurry a little if he wants to be a 1941 star, and, needless to say, the Roxyettes in a series of their most intriguing routines, which is a new expression meant to indicate that the Roxyettes are excessively elegant in practically everything they do. This expansive coterie combines talents that would make any stage bill a superlative one.

Jo Lombardi's orchestral contributions to the goings-on, the newsreel and the customary house features augment a program that is worth the trek, even with the snow as deep as it is.

Offers Notable 'Forum' Film

"International Forum" is having its first run all this week, up to and including Thursday, March 13, at the Trans-Lux Theater, where it was previewed on the evening of March 6, before an audience of Government officials, prominent Washington civic leaders and intellectuals.

This picture, the first of a series, stars Dorothy Thompson, "First Lady of Journalism;" Wythe Williams, radio oracle and foreign correspondent; William L. Shirer, well known to all radio listeners as the Berlin commentator, and Linton Wells, United Press correspondent and authority on the Orient.

As to the picture itself, there is not a dull moment. These people certainly do not "pull their punches," and most of their observations are based on actual experience and contacts. You will like Wythe Williams and his map of Europe, copied from Hitler's own. The round-table discussion is cleverly illustrated with actual war scenes and closes with individual opinions as to what 1941 will bring.

The war news brings pictures from the Libyan front, India and England. Schoolboys are now being trained for the Royal Air Force, while the waifs of London are evacuated to the country. John Bull's coast guard is shown in action as well as his motorized battalions. In New Zealand there is continued rallying of the troops.

On this side of the Atlantic, new "Blitz Buggies" are tested at Dearborn, Mich., for the Army, and in Illinois, steel mills are working at full capacity. Vice President Wallace meets with Latin-American diplomats; a new naval reserve radio school is launched in Connecticut, and 8,000,000 people seek a lost boy.

The sports field is topped with the Golden Gloves bouts at Madison Square Garden, followed with the Santa Anita Handicap, then the Widener Cup classic, and the Biscayne Bay Regatta. Baseball news includes practice shots of the Cincinnati Reds, Cleveland Indians and Philadelphia Athletics.

"Snow Fun" is the sport short subject and Donald Duck is at his funniest in "Timber."

Metropolitan

Life in "Arizona," as reflected again on the Metropolitan screen, is one grand melee of cattle stampedes, pesky redskins doublecrossing whiteskins and lovemaking with a Western accent. The dynamo of this Western saga is naturally Jean Arthur, No. 1 career woman of Arizona in the 1860's. Jean starts as the proprietress of Tucson's only pie bakery in the woolliest days of that metropolis, winds up as owner of Arizona's biggest ranch and with the handsomest, fighten'est husband in the territory.

Director Wesley Ruggles tossed the thought of expense out of the window when he made "Arizona." There are extras by the thousands in the big mob and fiesta scenes. And it must have cost a pretty penny to hire that huge herd of long-horned Texas steers for the stampede. The story by Clarence Budington Kelland is of top "best seller" caliber, omits nothing by way of giving the customers a thrill. It also gives a new angle on the Old West by indicating the growing pains of business in trying to get a foothold in a lawless land.

Jean Arthur is in her top form as Phoebe Titus, Tucson's girl wild-cat. She brandishes a six-gun and a pie pan with equal dexterity, later runs a freighting line (equivalent of a fleet of trucks), fights off those 'tarnal redskins, proposes to her man (William Holden) when she's sure he's the one for her, balks the villainous schemes of reynardish Warren William. She's hardboiled in jeans and sombrero, pretty as a valentine in a lace wedding dress.

Added Western flavor is given to the program by Cliff Edwards and his Buckaroos in a dude ranch special. There's a cartoon about Joe the Firefly. The newsreel is especially rich on the sports side.

Parachuting a Second Week

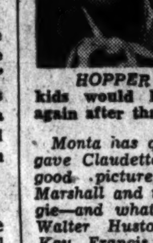

GENE RAYMOND AND CAROLE LOMBARD who still continue to thrill at being caught in the rain on that New York World's Fair parachute jump that comprises so important a part of the demented domestic comedy, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," now in the second chapter of its run on the screen at RKO-Keith's. Robert Montgomery it is, however, who is Miss Lombard's costar.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 7.

Nice to see Monta Bell at work on "Aloma of the South Seas," which stars Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall, the same team that brought the box office a flood of gold in "Hurricane."

HOPPER

Our ways are weird and wonderful. You would have thought these two kids would have been teamed again after that—but no.

Monta has quite a record. He gave Claudette Colbert her first good picture, also Herbert Marshall and the late O. P. Heggie—and what an actor he was! Walter Huston, Jeanne Eagles, Kay Francis, Charles Ruggles, Norma Shearer, Ginger Rogers, Eddie Robinson are only a few he started on their upswing. It was Monta's idea that "Goodbye Mr. Chips" would make a good movie. He worked six months before he could get anybody to agree with him.

Now, as soon as Director Mal St. Clair has a nice studio job, things will be looking brighter. Mal did a story last year with Alice Faye and Don Ameche — a sort of cavalcade of slapstick, with the Keystone cops. It was a riot.

At long last "The Yearling" is on its way. Thirty deer, eight bears, 20 dogs, 10 raccoons, and two trained buzzards are en route to Florida, with Chester Franklin as chaperon. (The actors follow in five weeks.) Just before they took off, there were two baby bears born, and the cubs looked like a couple of black rats. The mother wouldn't nurse them, so a brindled bulldog was hired as stand-in for her.

If you remember the story, the . . . cub and deer grow up with the boy, practically in the same bed. It's a Spence Tracy special —with Victor Fleming directing, and if picture is anything like the book, at least one Academy Award will come out of it.

Groucho Marx had a friend at the race track who was frightfully lucky. Groucho finally asked about his system, was told he bet on the jockey's colors. Well, he was missing from the track for a few days, and when he showed up again, he said to Groucho, "Oh, I had to take my draft examination. Now I don't know what I'm going to do about the races. They tell me I'm color blind."

When Martha O'Driscoll got a part in "Her First Beau," she thought at last she'd get a love scene opposite Jackie Cooper. What she got was Jackie for a brother.

Bette Davis has such a curious way of relaxing while listening to stories. She doubles up in her chair and ho'ds on to her knees.

Wonder when Darryl Zanuck is going to release "The Great Commandment." I was chatting with some Pasadena friends who had seen it. They thought it was terrific. Well, if ever there was a time to bring spiritual light into this world, now is the time.

At last Rita Hayworth gets a chance to show her twinkling feet. Incidentally, her husband tells me the doghouse at their new home has been finished and made to size—meaning his. There's a sense of humor for you.

Speaking of typing (well, who was?), John Howard sings and plays the piano, yet he's never been asked to do either on the screen. Yet that's a face that would take on a more romantic lilt with a melody. Well, whose wouldn't?

Kay Aldridge wanted to know how I slick my hair up the back and keep it there. Just use a spray of lacquer brilliantine, dearie, and it stays forever.

Since Bob Montgomery became head of our British War Relief, he's already collected $100,000 to send ambulance, units and planes to Capetown, South Africa. There aren't many actors with his sense and drive of organization.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 7.

JACK WARNER is telling the story of three con men who toured the country for many years, preying upon suckers they were able to lure into their con games. Then one day only two of them remained—for Joe, the third con man, died . . . The bereaved duo went to an undertaker, to purchase a suitable coffin for Joe. The salesman showed them many, ranging in price from $50 to $2,500 . . . While one kept the salesman occupied the other switched price tags on the coffins marked, respectively, $500 and $1,000. "I guess we'll take this one. Joe'd like it," the salesman was told—and the customers pointed to the $1,000 coffin which now had the $500 tag. The money was paid and delivery arranged. As they were leaving, the first con man told the other: "I watched you out of the corner of my eye. I saw you switch those price tags" . . . "Yes," sighed his partner, "Joe would've loved it."

LYONS

A CARNEGIE HALL concert is being arranged for Otto Klemperer, the conductor. Klemperer may bring suit against the sanitarium to which he voluntarily had gone for a rest cure—and from which an "Escape" alarm was spread . . . Ben Lucien Burman, the novelist whose "Blow for a Landing" was a best-seller, is going to Africa to join Gen. Wavell's army and report the war there for Readers Digest . . . Danny Kaye's contract for "Lady in the Dark" has been torn up and replaced by a new one—providing for double the original salary . . . Boris Karloff, who took the job in "Arsenic and Old Lace" because he was assured that it would bring him extra movie work, finally has made it. He'll appear in the new "Information Please" short.

THIS IS HOW Jan Valtin, author of the best-seller, "Out of the Night," selected the name under which he began his new life . . . He was Richard Krebs, in solitary confinement in a Nazi prison, when he decided to find a new name . . . He felt that it would be many years before his release—that his life then would be a new and different one and he needed a different name . . . He selected Jan as his first name, because that was the name of his son. He then selected Valentine, because in every country he had visited that name was not uncommon. But then he remembered a book he once had read, by a U-boat commander named Valentine, a book which contained some torpedoing episodes he disliked. And so he shortened Valentine to "Valtin."

AT TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX recently, three different writers worked on a difficult story. The completed movie was not a satisfactory one, and the writers insisted that their names be removed from the the credits. "But we can't release this picture anonymously," Zanuck told them. The scenarists threatened to present their case before the Screen Writers Guild. The producer realized that such publicity would ruin the movie, and so a fictitious name was used in the credits—which read something like: "Screen play by Wesley Aberthany" . . . Shortly after the picture was released, the company received a letter which worried its legal department. "Not only did your company steal the plot of the story I submitted to you last year," wrote the prankster, "but you were brazen enough to use my name as the author. Yours very truly—Wesley Aberthany."

NELSON ROCKEFELLER, arranging to send a ballet troupe to South America on a good-will tour, invited Vera Zorina to make the trip. Her rare beauty and talent would be as effective, in practical importance, as would a visit of the entire diplomatic staff . . . Zorina therefore was urged to make this trip, as an indication of her affection for America . . . "Only because I love America so much, I cannot make the trip and shall remain within our borders," the glamorous star replied. "For I will obtain my citizenship papers in October, and I cannot leave the country before then."

RKO-Keith's

A second week downtown is what the public decrees for the gay feature, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," and its grim companion-piece, the latest "March of Time." And a well deserved lease on life this is for these totally different films, each of which is just about tops in its own particular province.

"Mr. and Mrs. Smith," the feature, harks back to that cycle of screwball comedies that infested America a few seasons ago. Robert Montgomery and Carole Lombard are cast in the title roles, and handle them impeccably. Both Montgomery and Lombard are past masters of the art of being funny, so it is not the least surprising when they make Mr. Smith and his spouse so comic. What is amazing is the rib-tickling performance of Gene Raymond, in the chief supporting role. Raymond, who has hitherto been typed as a romantic glamour boy, gets the juicy role of a stuffed shirt in a mad world. He plays his part to perfection, and his drunk scene, we think, will go down in cinema history.

The supporting cast is without distinction. Philip Merivale and Lucile Watson, two very capable thespians, are lost in their minor roles. Jack Carson, a newcomer, is adequate in the guise of Montgomery's dumb friend, and Betty Compson comes on for a flash as a tough girl who fixes nosebleeds.

Augmenting the bill at Keith's is that "March of Time," "Uncle Sam—Nonbelligerent." Here are the films that were so dramatically seized by the British from the German vessel bound for South America. The picture is vivid, grim, dramatic. It takes the edge off such sprightly things as "Mr. and Mrs. Smith." Here the onlooker sees Paris, subjugated by the Nazis; Britain fighting for life amidst the choking flames of incendiary bombs? The R. A. F. bravely striking back; Germany clutching the Continent in a cruel grip, and America, facing an uncertain future. Here is written starkly the story of Europe's grief, of Britain's hope, of America's dilemma. It is a picture without a peer, and should be seen by every American.

Strike Voted At Aluminum Defense Plant

By the Associated Press

New strike developments in defense industries yesterday included announcement of a 1,641-to-65 vote by C. I. O. employes to empower their union leaders to call a strike at the Edgewater, N. J., plant of the Aluminum Company of America unless the company meets increased pay demands. Company officials said the plant was engaged exclusively in defense production.

The Federal Motor Truck Co. plant at Detroit, employing about 800 workers, closed after a C. I. O. walkout. Demands were reported by a C. I. O. spokesman to include wage increases, a vacation allowance or bonus, pay for drafted men and "some sort of assurance" for union security. The company's president said it had $3,000,000 of defense orders.

At Pittsburgh, the C. I. O. steel workers' organizing committee, demanding a 10-cent an hour wage increase, refused to accept a United States Steel Corporation compromise offer of 2½ cents and backed its rejection with a threat to terminate its contract with "Big Steel."

Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, reported to a special convention of 150 union leaders that after conferring since November with the steel corporation, it had made the counter offer, which he considered insufficient.

The delegates then unanimously approved the original list of nine demands made by the union leader. These included in addition to the wage increase, the establishment of "adequate machinery to permit the union to collect dues from employes receiving the benefits of the basic agreement."

The C. I. O. leader visited President Benjamin Fairless of U. S. Steel shortly after the convention recessed until morning to report personally on the action. Neither commented upon this meeting.

Murray said he felt the corporation could afford a 10-cent-an-hour raise without increasing the price of steel. He pointed out it had made $102,000,000 net profit last year after "generous deductions for depreciation, etc.," and estimated the union demands would amount to $52,000,000 annually.

On the other hand, the company's offer, he said, would amount to only $1 a week for the 261,000 workers, or about $13,000,000 a year. He added that this boost of less than 2 per cent was not giving labor a "just share of profits."

Murray disclosed also that proposals for similar changes in contracts with the Jones & Laughlin and Crucible Steel Cos. had been made, but no counter-suggestions had been received. He said negotiations with these concerns would be held up pending outcome of those with "big steel."

In Washington, deadlocked on several issues, negotiators seeking to settle strikes at four International Harvester Co. plants recessed last night with no definite plans for further meetings.

Dr. John R. Steelman, chief of the Federal labor conciliators, later issued a statement indicating that agreement had been reached on some points, but that he felt further conferences at this time would be fruitless.

The strikes at the Harvester plants in Chicago, Rock Falls, Ill., and Richmond, Ind., were called in connection with demands by the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee, chief of which was one for recognition as the collective bargaining agents for workers in those plants. The company holds large Federal contracts for defense materials.

progress at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Although he admitted that he did not know exactly what remedy to propose, he intimated that the solution might lie in further attempts at applying the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

When a reporter pointed out that a Supreme Court decision said these disputes could not be interfered with, Mr. Roosevelt replied that that was a generalization.

He explained that one case might go before the court and be decided in one way, but that a second case, in all respects similar to the layman's eye, might be decided differently by the court.

He implied that in the Administration's current study of labor problems one of the difficulties was the question of whether these jurisdictional disputes could be handled without additional legislation.

Questioned whether Philip Murray, C. I. O. president and a recent White House luncheon guest, had expressed opposition to a Federal board such as the one the President outlined, Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative. Asked whether Murray was in general agreement with him, the President said things were going very well.

Although Murray refused to discuss details of his talk with Roosevelt this week, it was learned that following the meeting he authorized an editorial to appear Monday in the C. I. O. News which is sharply critical of the proposal and follows the argument of a memorandum sent by Murray earlier this week to Sidney Hillman. The memorandum condemned the proposed board as a device which would tend to prevent free collective bargaining and serve to hold wages down.

The President said the proposed mediation agency, which might have to be established in time as a top board in Washington, is still in the nebulous stage, with thousands of ramifications.

Doctors Exonerated

DR. LEON A. MARTEL DR. J. ROGERS YOUNG

CLEARED BY VERDICT—Under trial for violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, these two physicians were exonerated yesterday in District Court by a direct verdict of acquittal

Leon A. Martel and Dr. J. Rogers Young, both of Washington; the Washington Academy of Surgery, and the Harris County (Tex.) Medical Society.

Thus, it was left up to the jury to decide the guilt or innocence, under an indictment charging violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act by restraining G. H. A., of the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and these 18 individual defendants:

Principal witnesses heard yesterday were brought in by the defense for the purpose of rebutting the Government's accusations that G. H. A. patients were handled shabbily at Garfield, Emergency and Sibley hospitals.

Most articulate was Dr. Thomas J. Dugan, jr., a physician attached to the District Training School, at Laurel, Md. He was a resident physician at Garfield Hospital when Miss Elizabeth Tew, a G. H. A. member, was admitted on February 26, 1938.

During an hour and a quarter crowded with clashes between witness and prosecution, prosecution and bench and between opposing counsel, Dr. Dugan stoutly maintained that everything possible was done for Miss Tew.

Enjoys Limelight

Confident to the point of cocksureness, welcoming cross-examination jousts with John Henry Lewin, of the prosecution table, the 31-year-old physician seemingly enjoyed his spot in the limelight.

He admitted informing Dr. Raymond E. Selders, G. H. A. surgeon, that he could not operate on Miss Tew because Dr. Selders did not have Garfield courtesy privileges. When Miss Tew left, without the operation she had come for, it was against Dr. Dugan's advice, he testified.

To questions by counsel he would sometimes respond "Oh, no, no, no," or "I'd love to." Asked if he knew Dr. Selders, the witness replied:

"Oh, I've scrubbed with him a few times."

That brought about an explanation by him, requested by Justice Proctor, of "scrubbing," which is the surgeon's word for washing up in preparation for an operation.

When Lewin asked Dr. Dugan how old he is, he replied, in substance, that he was 28 at the time of the Tew case and since that was three years ago, it was not difficult to deduce his age.

And so it went between the witness and Lewin, cross-examiner, much haranguing give and take. Their skirmishes ended abruptly when Lewin, asking Dr. Dugan a question pertaining to the morphine injection which had been given Miss Tew, heard the court suggest that perhaps this line of interrogation had gone far enough.

Reprimanded by Court

The prosecutor took exception and was reprimanded by Justice Proctor for his persistent comments on the court's ruling.

Following Dr. Dugan to the stand was Dr. H. F. Kreuzberg, who formerly served with him at Garfield, but court was adjourned until Monday morning before the day's last witness had gone far in his testimony.

Earlier, the jury heard Miss Isabel Kanfoush, formerly a nurse at Emergency Hospital, defend that institution's relations with Mrs. Harriet A. Austin when, a traffic victim, she was brought there the night of September 7, 1938.

The witness, now attached to Walter Reed Hospital, said Mrs. Austin refused to allow her to telephone Dr. Selders after being informed that the G. H. A. surgeon would not be permitted to operate on her since he was not on the hospital's courtesy list.

"Everything was done for her that could be done," said Miss Kanfoush, who added that the patient was not so badly hurt that she could not walk out of the hospital.

Dr. Solet Testifies

Dr. Leo Solet, of Arlington, Va., gave testimony to counteract the Government's contention that Sibley Hospital refused to let Dr. Selders operate on Charles G. Hardin, jr., another G. H. A. member, on June 19, 1938.

When he examined Hardin at his residence, Dr. Solet testified, and asked the patient who was his choice of surgeon for an appendicitis operation, Hardin replied, "You're the doctor, you select him." The sick man, although a GHA member, did not mention Dr. Selders, according to the witness.

Accordingly, Dr. Solet continued, he asked a non-GHA doctor, a member of the District Medical Society, to take the case. The witness flatly denied that Mrs. Hardin said, in his presence, that her husband was a member of Group Health Association.

Miss Milline Realinni, of the Sibley Hospital administration, told the court she had no alternative but to inform Dr. Selders, on the telephone, that he could not operate on Hardin since his name was not on the courtesy list.

After adjournment yesterday Defense Counsel Leahy indicated that he will call "several" of the defendants to the stand on Monday.

tack with land forces, the admiralty said in London.

A German ship, the Uckermark, 7,021 tons, also was scuttled, and a second German ship, the 590-ton Askari, was driven ashore, it was related in a communique.

Then the fleet hastened on up the coast, flinging shells into Brava and Mogadiscio, Somaliland capital, and helping in the swift capture of the latter February 26.

There the 9,830-ton British cruiser Shropshire sent her 8-inch shells into the 6,861-ton Italian tanker Pennsylvania and sank her, it was added.

British suspicions that Chisimaio and Mogadiscio were used as refueling stations by German surface raiders were confirmed, the admiralty said, by the discovery and release of 200 British and Allied seamen held prisoner near Mogadiscio after their ships had been sunk.

As to the Mediterranean theater, the British acknowledged that a mass raid by 100 or more German dive-bombers, bombers and fighters was carried out against Malta on Wednesday.

The British said they bagged 16 of the raiders. Some damage to buildings was conceded along with the loss of one British fighter.

Mexican Vote Of Confidence Backs United States Tie

By International News Service

Mexico City, March 7.—The Mexican Senate amid cheers today gave the government an unanimous vote of confidence in its foreign policy after Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla bluntly announced that, if circumstances warrant, Mexico "will not vacillate" in entering into a military alliance with the United States.

The Senate enthusiastically expressed support of the accords already reached by the government of President Manuel Avila Camacho with the United States and other American republics.

Facing a barrage of questions, Padilla told the Senate that air and naval bases are to be built in Mexico "with Mexican money and Mexican workers and to be policed by Mexican soldiers." The foreign minister said:

"These bases will be placed at the disposition of other countries of this hemisphere."

Defining Mexico's attitude in relation to the wars abroad, Padilla declared:

"Neutrality is not a thing to be discussed in these moments when the destinies of our continent demand that we adopt an attitude of defense.

"Let us go forward proudly to our defense, convinced that we are defending a great cause."

Padilla strongly advocated a military alliance between Mexico and the United States. He praised the policy of the United States toward Latin America, urged greater efforts to bolster Pan-American solidarity, and concluded with a condemnation of the "Fifth Column" that sows doubt among us." U. S. Ambassador Josephus Daniels termed the foreign minister's speech "magnificent in manner and material."

Doctors' Dilemma

The question of deferring conscription for professional men is due for a thorough going-over when the Senate Committee on Military Affairs takes up the Murray bill. Senator Murray has proposed to amend the Selective Service Act so that medical and dental students, interns and residents may be guaranteed a chance to complete their training. At present the responsibility rests entirely upon the local Selective Service Boards, and that is where the national headquarters of the Selective Service System insists it should be. The trouble is that local board members are inclined to doubt that they can take the responsibility for deferring conscription of any large groups. In Washington most board members interviewed agreed that it is in the national interest for medical men to complete their training, but did not believe that local officials should provide the deferment under present regulations. Some were strongly in favor of an amendment to the Selective Service Act.

The Post pointed out the dangers of blanket deferments when Mayor LaGuardia asked Selective Service headquarters to intercede for New York police and firemen. In that and all other instances national officials of the draft have maintained a commendable impartiality. They rightly fear that exemptions for one calling would inspire pressure on behalf of many others. But the question of medical men is not to be settled so simply. There is bound to be a depletion of doctors for the civilian population through the use of physicians by the armed forces. According to an official of the United States Public Health Service the Army employs so many more physicians per person that for every doctor taken into the service five or six civilians are in effect deprived of medical service. Already, hospitals are reporting a shortage of interns. Arguments for deferment could be concluded from the observation of the Federal Security Agency. The health and medical committee of this body has stressed the importance of a continuous supply of new doctors. The subcommittee on medical education, also, believes that present teaching facilities will suffice if students now registered are allowed to continue. We may thus infer some misgivings as to what would happen if large numbers of medical students were called to the colors.

The Murray bill, of course, must stand on its own merits, and the specific opposition of Secretary of War Stimson and national Selective Service officials should be given proper weight. Hearings on the measure promise the only good way to date of threshing out a problem of interest to the country at large. In this connection it may be hoped that no effort will be spared to determine the attitude of those in the best position to know the situation, namely, the local boards.

What Borah Said

Senator Wheeler has invoked the authority of Senator Borah in support of his case that the President's powers as Commander in Chief are conditional powers. The Senator spoke of Senator Borah "thoroughly agreeing with me and fighting side by side with me" when the question came up over the sending of Marines to Nicaragua in 1928. Well, here is what Senator Borah actually said:

> If the Army is in existence, if the Navy is in existence, if it is subject to command, he may send it where he will in the discharge of his duty to protect the life and property of American citizens. Undoubtedly he could send it, although the money were not in the Treasury.

It is true that Mr. Borah did not feel that the sending of Marines to Nicaragua was "based upon realities"; but he didn't challenge the President's powers to send them. "The President acted upon the facts as presented to him," he said. He added that "The President may employ the troops in a foreign country for the purpose of protecting life and property, as a defensive act. . . . But the moment that action takes on the nature of an aggressive action, the seizing of territory, the carrying on of armed conflict, a controversy with any faction or any part of the government; when it becomes war, as war is defined by the Supreme Court of the United States, a conflict between two opposing forces, I think the President, when Congress is available, should also consult the Congress, and have his authority confirmed by Congress." The confirmation of the President's existing powers under the Constitution, rather than a request for extra-Constitutional powers, is precisely the aim of the lend-lease bill.

Indefensible Strike

President Roosevelt missed a good opportunity yesterday to tell the country how a strike in a single plant is jeopardizing the United States' defense program. Instead, he reasserted a belief that strikes have not affected more than one-quarter of 1 per cent of our defense output at any one time. We do not know the source of the President's information or his method of calculating the effect of any particular strike upon the Nation's defense effort. But we do know that the idleness of one vital defense factory has created a disturbing situation.

The output of the idle Allis-Chalmers plant may not bulk large in comparison to our total production of war materials. But it happens that this company holds orders for the manufacture of special machinery to be used in the manufacture of powder. In other parts of the country three new powder plants are being rushed to completion, but unless the Allis-Chalmers strike is speedily settled they will lack machinery to begin their production on schedule, for powder cannot be manufactured without the proper machinery; ammunition cannot be made without powder; guns are useless without ammunition, and airplanes, tanks and fighting ships are useless without effective guns.

The Allis-Chalmers plant is supposed to be producing various artillery supplies in addition to its powder-manufacturing machinery. But this one item is sufficient to show how far-reaching the effects of a strike may be. Continued idleness in this plant may thus create a weak link in the entire defense program. Yet President Roosevelt was content to dismiss this danger merely by acknowledging that the Allis-Chalmers strike creates a bottleneck situation.

Continuation of this strike is the more inexcusable because of the petty nature of the dispute now keeping the plants idle. Three weeks ago representatives of the company and the union came to Washington and agreed with officials of the OPM upon a formula for settlement of the dispute. That formula provides for an arbitrator to iron out various points of disagreement. But a fresh controversy broke out when Sidney Hillman, associate director of the OPM, gave a statement to both sides recommending acceptance of the agreement "with the understanding that it is not to be considered or used as a device to promote a closed or all-union shop or to make a man's job dependent upon union membership."

Representatives of the union accepted the tentative agreement, but they still reject Mr. Hillman's interpretation that it means an open shop. The company accepted the agreement with the Hillman interpretation. Since February 15, therefore, work vital to our national defense has been held up by a childish row over whether the tentative agreement means what Mr. Hillman apparently saw in it. It is incredible that such a controversy should delay urgent defense preparations week after week. In fact, it is so incredible that the story has been carefully withheld from the public. Naturally officials do not wish the public to know that defense projects are being held up by such peanut squabbles. But this is precisely where the OPM and the Administration are making a serious mistake. For one of the strongest weapons they have against arbitrary employers and unions is publicity.

Yesterday the President denounced in no uncertain terms jurisdictional strikes holding up defense work. An equally forthright exposure of the sham battle which is threatening serious delays in the production of powder might bring that dispute to a speedy end. Of course, it might be embarrassing to show that a strike is continuing merely because a company clings to a statement by the labor representative on the OPM. But this is no time to place face-saving above the national interest.

Lotta Svard

Incipient movements to mobilize the women of America in the country's defense suggests that the organizers have taken a leaf out of the Finnish copybook. In Finland the womenfolk are always on defense work, whether their country is at peace or war. And for this work they are banded together in what is known as the Lotta Svard, after the name of the heroine of Runeberg's classic song of the Russian war in Finland a century and a quarter ago. Lotta was the wife of a soldier at the front who continued to tend the menfolk after her husband had been killed. The poem breathes a glowing sense of duty, and, consequently, it is the highest ambition of a Finnish girl to become a Lotta. On becoming a member of one of the units, her duty is to awaken and strengthen the idea of the National Guard and assist the guard "in defending the faith, the home, and the country." To this end the women in peacetime do all kinds of chores gratuitously for the guard, such as running "drives" for them and doing their catering. Meantime they keep up their training for service in wartime as nurses and helpers of all kinds. How thoroughly they are prepared for war service was demonstrated in the recent war. War correspondents in Finland told of wisps of girls turned Amazons—spotting for enemy planes all day at the top of ski jumps in the Arctic north, mounting guard in the trenches while their menfolk were stealing up on Russian bivouacs in the snow, and doing countless other jobs with a fervor and an efficiency and an endurance which spurred their menfolk to fight and fight again. Finland's women are a shining example of service to women everywhere, and there could be no better inspiration for any women's organization in our country.

The Overton Bill

Washington has petitioned Congress for the last ten years to regularize the fiscal relations between the Federal and local Governments. Its appeal has been based on the grounds of equity and sound budgeting practice. Since it is generally acknowledged that the Government owes some obligation to the city which provides it with water, police and fire protection and many other forms of municipal service, there is certainly a strong argument against leaving the extent of that obligation to guesswork. In its preoccupation with national and international affairs, however, Congress has neglected the problem year after year. Now it returns to Capitol Hill under particularly urgent circumstances. For Washington is once more beginning to feel the growing pains incident to a gigantic national defense program. It is estimated that 200,000 new residents may flock to the city. Yet new schools, streets, sewers, health facilities, etc., are already urgently needed for the existing population. Clearly, the District cannot possibly meet the crisis without additional help from the Federal Government or abandonment of its pay-as-you-go policy.

For this reason alone the hearings to be held on the Overton bill attain a special urgency. While the defense program increases the city's expenses, it reduces the area from which taxes may be derived. For each new Federal building puts more land on the tax-exempt list. And even in considering amendments to the local income tax law the House is planning to give the States the first chance to obtain revenue from persons actually living here but maintaining a legal residence in the States. With such problems thrust upon the local community, it is impossible to see how Congress can refuse to enlarge the so-called Federal contribution.

Some valid objections have been raised against the formula presented by Senator Overton. Nevertheless, it offers a fair and reasonable basis for division of the cost of operating the District government. Since some action must be taken to prevent development of a desperate situation in the District, critics of the Overton bill would do well to hold their fire until they have something better to offer.

Classroom Reds

An instructor in history at the College of the City of New York has testified that between 40 and 50 of his faculty colleagues are now, or lately have been, members of the Communist Party. Of these he mentioned 34 by name, giving also the pseudonyms by which he said they are known to their party comrades. His statements will scarcely be received with surprise by those who have followed all the turmoils and alarms at that institution in the past few years. Indeed, some may even sigh with relief to discover that the proportion of Communists is not larger. Considerably more startling, however, were the charges that teaching at the college has been "deliberately slanted" to emphasize the theory of class struggle, and that certain student members of the party were instructed to join the R. O. T. C. and to work for commissions in order to spread Bolshevist ideas into the Army.

Unless and until the Communist Party is outlawed here, as it has been in other countries, any teacher has the right to join it, whether openly or privily. At the same time the citizens of New York City have not merely a right but an absolute duty to make certain that students are not being indoctrinated in the Marxist gospel by Marxist evangelists at the public expense. The instructor's statements are grave enough to warrant the fullest possible investigation. For if proved, they will offer a serious challenge to the wisdom of tax-supported higher education as at present conducted.

LOOK AT THE CHICKADEE

I take my lesson from the chickadee
Who in the storm
Receives a special fire to keep him warm,
Who in the dearth of a December day
Can make the seed of a dead weed his stay,
So simple and so small
And yet the hardiest hunter of them all.

The world is winter now and I, who go
Loving no verdure half so much as snow,
In this white blinding desert have been sent
A most concise and charming argument.
To them who seek to flout austerity,
Who have a doubt of God's solicitude
For even the most trivial of His brood,
To them whose minds are chilled with misery,
I have a brief audacious word to say:
Look at the chickadee,
That small perennial singer of the earth,
Who makes the weed of a December day
The pivot of his mirth.

Post-Impressionist Art

During my experience as a gallery director I have become very familiar with the many reasons the general public has expressed for disliking modern art, but seldom has a more curious and disingenuous argument come to my attention than that expressed by Mr. P. O'Shea in his recent letter to The Post. Mr. O'Shea, while professing to admire the contributions made by Cezanne, Gauguin, Van Gogh "and the rest" to contemporary art, claims that painters should now turn their backs on these achievements and presumably return to the photographic naturalism and literary style which characterized the pre-Impressionist painting of the nineteenth century.

I fail to see how anyone can be a serious student of modern art without realizing that "Cezanne and the rest" were not merely revolutionaries, but that they also brought to light new artistic truths and new ways of seeing form and color, the possibilities of which were by no means realized in their own lifetime. Cezanne died believing that he had failed in his attempts, while Picasso, the most versatile of all living artists, seldom endeavored more than to explore superficially all of the countless new avenues which he had opened up. How can the painter today, faced with this wealth of exciting material, be blamed for continuing some of these experiments, any more than the scientist should be blamed for following on the experiments of others in the same field? The results may not always be successful—and I, personally, deplore pseudo-modern art far more deeply than Mr. O'Shea—but no one can deny that the really beautiful paintings which have been produced as a direct result of the post-Impressionist movement are in themselves sufficient justification.

It is, moreover, quite absurd to state that the Ecole de Paris (many of whose members were, incidentally, not French at all) has been the only source of inspiration in contemporary American painting. Mr. O'Shea completely fails to mention such artists as Thomas Benton, Grant Wood and John Steuart Curry, who have deliberately turned their backs on France and have sought for guidance in the Italian primitives and the art of the Renaissance, or such painters as Georgia O'Keeffe and John Marin, the sources of whose influences are still more complex. Indeed, one of the most noticeable things about modern American painting is its variety and the multiplicity of styles and techniques which have been developed in recent years. Only the most unobservant and obtuse critics can lump together so many different kinds of artists and dismiss them airily as "modern."

I personally believe that American art today far from being decadent, is healthier, more varied and more genuinely creative than at any other time in the history of this country, and that the present age may be considered in retrospect as the equivalent of our Renaissance. We may still be too close to what is actually happening to pick out the great names of the future—but that, after all, is comparatively unimportant. Let us start by maintaining an open mind about art, supporting the artists in our own community and giving the best of them financial encouragement, and we may rest safely assured that posterity will wisely decide their ultimate value.

Senator Wheeler

The Hon. Burton K. Wheeler is spending himself to convince America that the only threat to her peace and security comes from her own sons.

Is there no way to show this stout-hearted warrior against war he is advocating action which tacitly supports the apostles of war in their assault on those who, relying implicitly on the permanence of peace, did not look to their arms until it was almost too late to save the Christian ideals upon which peace must rest? Can no one convince this brave but blind man he is facing and fighting the wrong way, raining blows on the heads of brother Americans with whom he should be standing shoulder to shoulder; that he is mowing down friends and leading foes through the break in the ranks? Is there no lens that will focus the eyes of this splendid American on the advancing, primative pagan force that is crushing Christian civilization with the ruthlessness of an avalanche?

EDNA G. VONNEGUT.
Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 28.

The democratic airing of all varieties of mature opinion is essential to our governmental processes. But Senator Wheeler's views have been shouted forth in a continuing crescendo of pointless repetition and obstructionism while the country waits for action in a desperate and maybe fatal crisis. Muddled thinking and vainglory that lead a nation and a world-wide cause into fatality cannot be excused by calling it "sincere."

Filibustering

The opponents of the Administration are filibustering—a little differently, to be sure, from the recognized methods—but they are likely to delay our aid to Britain until it is too late. They are playing the part played by the French and English "appeasers" until one of those nations was destroyed and the other brought to the verge of destruction. The obstructionists in the Senate are pursuing precisely the tactics they would adopt if acting directly under instructions from Berlin and Moscow. W. C. ROSE.
Ashland, Mass., March 3.

How Hitler must smile when he hears of the filibustering tactics of a handful of isolationist Senators delaying the passage of the lend-lease bill. According to Gallup polls, about three-fourths of the people of this Nation favor the passage of the bill, but Senators Wheeler, Clark, et al., evidently disregard that fact. When Hitler wrote in his book about the clumsy democracies and how slow and bungling their legislatures are, he knew whereof he was speaking. C. R. G.
Washington, March 5.

I quite agree that we could mind our own business and let France and England be conquered—up to the fall of France. But when the Nazi menace loomed large and potent, I woke up to the job we have before us.

When Colonel Knox entered his former opponent's Cabinet he sensed the danger. When Willkie refused to take a peace-at-any-price stand in 1940, he sensed it. When Dewey proclaimed support of the lend-lease bill, he sensed it—just as F. D. R. sensed it and ordered a draft that might well have lost the election for him.

I fail to savvy the workings of the minds of the opposition throughout the land. If all their arguments were correct, I still would get ready to risk all to end Nazism—just in case the isolationists' calculations went astray. To filibuster or to hold back the great effort in any way is to gamble with the way of life for Americans for years to come. G. H. MITCHELL.

Senate Debate On The Lend-Lease

I love this country where my ancestors have lived for many generations. I have always thought any man a sorry creature who did not govern himself directly or through his chosen representatives, under majority control. I thought our Constitution guaranteed to United States citizens this human right, that this was in fact the meaning of democracy. But in this world crisis when every minute counts and avoidable delay is criminal, a rule of our Senate permits a handful of its members to impede the will of the majority and seems to confirm the Nazi sneer that our Government is a democracy only in name.

What form of government is this when a man can hold the floor "two weeks more if I want to," thereby preventing his colleagues from voting and the President from acting? It is the negation of orderly government, the "revolution of nihilism" which is known to be Hitler's aim. Is it conceivable that these Senators believe themselves to be supporting our Constitution when they display such ill-bred self-will?

For pique and prejudice or to satisfy old antagonisms of race and creed, these men are playing Hitler's game as I saw it played among Sudeten Germans and Slovaks in 1938, by half-truths and lies. The technique is easily recognized. They are out to smash American unity by instilling doubt and distrust of our Government and by presenting to the credulous a false vision of peace—we can do this and that "at peace"—as if there could be any peace with Hitler on top, except the peace of submission. Self-willed men never love democracy, whatever their protestations. These Senators delay the vote on H. R. 1776, hoping soon to be able to say "Why help a lost cause?" History will bury them in contempt and will not forgive a Senate which lets itself be trapped in rules of its own making.

There is plenty of intelligence in our country. Millions of mechanics, farmers, postmen, clerks, taxi drivers, have followed the news and with love of fair play detest Hitler and all his works. They are becoming bored and disgusted with the talkers on the Hill. Their attitude is "Let every man who wants to speak hurry up about it, so we can get action. At such a time Congress shouldn't be a debating club." They don't respect poor losers and they ask no further information on Senatorial points of view, having already made up their minds and expressed their opinion in favor of quick, effective aid to Britain and Greece.

They knew where Roosevelt stood when they voted for him in November. The Senators whom Lee, of Oklahoma, wisely calls "Helpers of Hitler" are well aware that Roosevelt would be reelected if polls were held today, that the "avalanche of letters against the bill" they have received represents a small minority of the citizenry. They hear their own oratory, the chatter of their set, and whispers from Berlin; they do not heed the common talk of the American people and so fail to realize how low they are falling in popular esteem and that their willingness to let dry rot invade the state is not widely shared. Chamberlain and his group made the same mistake.

The Post Impressionist

The 'Dick-Weed Horse'

The summer afternoon was blistering hot; the sun beat down with a relentless shimmering brilliance upon the fields and forced the growing vegetation into wilted submission.

It would have been much to my liking to lie on my back out under the old "Grandmammy" apple tree and trace extravagant patterns of high adventure in the chance arrangement of the foliage. But mother said, "Dwight is not well; I cannot allow him to go out in the heat. You must tell him stories or play some quiet game with him."

The assignment did not please either Dwight or me very much. We were both rather fiercely individualistic with incompatible notions of what constituted "good fun." His favorite sport was riding a "dick-weed horse." From the vantage point of my five-year seniority that very simple business of stripping a 4-foot stick-weed of leaves, mounting the stalk, and loping through the fields and pastures seemed much too juvenile.

True, with a little cooperation in inventing and maintaining make-believes, he could carry on some lively adventures on "horseback." At times he was the doctor clattering with frantic speed to the bedside of a snake-bitten patient. A life was hanging in the balance: the gallant steed was not to be spared at a time like that. The suspense was terrific.

When my spectator interest began to wane, the versatile equestrian would, by the simple expedient of a lisping announcement, become the local preacher out visiting his flock around the countryside. The "horse" would slow down to a leisurely canter and a solemn peacefulness would come over us.

A transition from preacher to farmer was easily accomplished by taking on a "sack of corn," which might be as remote from reality as a "dick-weed" was from a horse. The "rider" would set off at a moderate gallop on a long journey "over the mountains and through the wild forest." The destination was vague, but we saw to it that there were "dangers." The "journey" would take him away—but not far, nor long enough to suit me. When I was lying stretched out in the grass, having a very good time without him, he would come galloping up, achieving imperfect hoof-clattering sound effects by slapping his thighs, and take the hurdle, or try to take it, right over my relaxed body. He usually landed on my stomach and came a cropper on the other side, his "horse" broken in two. He would look solemnly at the dead beast and with a great show of undaunted courage say, "Floss, fix me another dick-weed horse." Motivated solely by self-interest, I would quickly fill the order, and off he would go. This is the sort of young brother I was supposed to "tend" on a hot summer afternoon.

We glared at each other tentatively, then he offered, "I could wide a dick-weed horse on the porch." I didn't say anything because I thought scornfully what does a 4-year-old know about reasoning.

With exaggerated hopping about and much splashing I prepared a basin of soapsuds and said, just as though I were talking only to myself, "I'm going to blow some dweat big soap bubbles." He looked on with elaborate unconcern for some time. Finally he said, "Let me make some bubbles." I felt then that I had gained a significant mastery over him; he was yielding to my authority. This pleased me, and I allowed him to blow bubbles as long as he liked while I glanced up occasionally from a picture book to say, "Um-m! Beautiful," just to keep him going.

His interest began to fade, and it was necessary to say, "Um-m! Beautiful," oftener and with more emphasis until I finally decided it would be better to devise a new project. I reflected, with a warm feeling of superiority, that it certainly was difficult to get down on the juvenile level of a 4-year-old. Of course, there was no use trying to entertain him with any of my favorite interests; I was 9 years old and knew everything—almost.

He had turned from his bubbles and I felt the old "dick-weed horse" problem about to rear its ugly head again. I just had to think of something. But what? As I turned to empty the deserted bubbles a big black spider ran across the floor.

"Oo-o," I squealed with affected juvenility, "here's an old fellow hurrying home to dinner. Watch him but don't touch. See where he goes."

Quickly I emptied the basin and half refilled it with clear water. I ran out to a dogwood tree and cut a small branch which had three twigs at the same lineal point. I trimmed the branch into a miniature tripod and stood it in the basin, squealing excitedly now and then so Dwight would not lose interest. Round-eyed, he divided his attention impartially between the "pider" and me.

With a small stick I maneuvered my research victim on to the top of the tripod, where it sat unhappily surrounded by a four or five inch width of water. For some time nothing at all happened. At last an incredibly fine silken strand came miraculously out from the spider, floating and wavering as it lengthened and slowly reached the edge of the basin, to which it attached itself as if by magic. The spider took off triumphantly from its desert island, crossed its fragile silken bridge and gained the basin edge.

Dwight broke into gleeful laughter. "Do it again," he begged.

Our poor harassed victim furnished six encores without a single variation. I felt vaguely that there was in its infinite patience a lesson of far-reaching moral implication. So as I liberated the spider with requisite gratitude for a fine performance, I lectured soberly. "That just shows you 'If at first you don't succeed try, try again.'"

"Twy again," Dwight echoed. "Twy to get me a dick-weed horse."

The Labor Party

By Harold J. Laski

Labor-Churchill Alliance For Victory

London.

I HAVE TWICE in the last two weeks taken in Labor party delegate conferences in provincial areas of this country. The first was in a Midlands mining area; and the main body of delegates were miners, many of whom, through the difficult situation in the export trade, were either part or wholly unemployed. The second was in East Anglia and consisted almost wholly of agricultural workers.

LASKI

A delegate conference of the Labor party, I should have explained, consists invariably of two parts. The executive speaker makes an address which lasts for the best part of an hour; and he is then cross-examined by the delegates for a period which varies according to the extent of the blackout time—in the two cases I am describing, for close on to two hours. The questions, in my experience, resolve themselves into three fairly well-defined groups. First, there is always a small number by professional cranks with panaceas to expound. Second, there is a considerable number which relate to immediate questions — old age pensions, allowances for dependents of men in the fighting forces, and so on. Third, there is still a greater number which relate to matters of fundamental policy—peace terms, reconstruction, the future of socialism, relations with the Soviet Union are a fair example. Mostly, this third type comes from opinion of the Left and even from delegates who, though at a Labor conference, are secretly or openly members of the Communist party and have come in for the special purpose of attacking the Labor party's official policy. Some of them even had their questions prepared for them in the local Communist party office, as shown by the fact that they read them from a multigraphed typescript.

I think it is a pretty fair summary of these conferences—typical of the many I have taken in during the last few months—to say that they represent the following conclusions:

FIRST, THERE is overwhelming agreement that the Labor party was right to enter the national government under Mr. Churchill's leadership last May. Second, there is overwhelming agreement that pursuit of the war up to the overthrow of Nazism is essential to the future of the working class in this country. Third, there is overwhelming agreement that Mr. Churchill is a superb leader of the country for this purpose. Fourth, there is flat confidence in the record of Mr. Morrison and Mr. Bevin among the Labor leaders in the government. Fifth, there is wide agreement that the future peace of the world depends on the fullness of understanding between Britain and America; connected with this is a deep sense that President Roosevelt must play an essential part in the definition of peace aims. Sixth, there is deep disappointment at the attitude of the Soviet Union. That it should feel the need of neutrality is widely understood; what is puzzling is the continued expansion of hostility to the British cause and expression of friendship to Nazi Germany.

No one, I think, can mistake the reality and depth of these opinions; the speaker who differs from them risks exposure to a rapid, even angry, fire of interruption from the general body of delegates. Behind these opinions are others perhaps less widely felt and certainly less widely articulate, which nevertheless command a considerable and, I should judge, growing following.

First, the Labor-Churchill alliance is for victory in the war. Second, this war is being won by workers; to them, therefore, is due a new social order which gives them the promise of a more effective economic security and greater equality of opportunity after the war. Third, it will be intolerable if arrangements are not made now to prevent mass unemployment in depressed areas after the war. The test of the bona fides of the Government is whether it takes steps now so as to be ready after the hostilities to cope with these problems. Fourth, Hitler and Mussolini are evil men whose defeat is urgent; but it is not enough merely to defeat them. It is necessary to deal with the causes which made them possible. Fifth, businessmen and conservative politicians speak fair words now to workers because they are in a position of extreme danger; they are no more likely to remember those words after this war than they did after the last. The duty of Labor members of the Government is, therefore, to take steps now to see that there is the reality of deeds behind the fair words while national unity makes agreement on big measures possible. Sixth, the fact that Mr. Churchill is a great war premier does not mean he is the right man to make peace. His refusal to publish war aims makes them suspect pressures to which he is subject as leader of the Conservative party. Seventh, there is dislike of the narrow limits of the rationing system and it is felt that this makes it operate unfairly as between the rich and the poor. Eighth, there is criticism of the failure of the Government (a) to restore full-time education for working class children when middle class children have not suffered in this way, and (b) resentment at the unequal incidence of the burden of evacuation upon poor compared to rich homes. There is no difficulty in getting a spate of questions built upon the belief that billeting officers unduly favor the rich.

I AM, I THINK, objectively reporting the kind of argument I have to deal with at conferences of this kind. I have found very little patience with the Communist approach. Where it affects an area it will, I think, usually be found to be due to one or another of some simple causes:

First, a big employer in the district has a bad record in relation to trade unionism. The notion that he is interested in war for democracy and freedom can then be attacked with ease. Second, an inefficient local authority failed to grapple adequately with air raid protection problems. This, then, can easily be blamed on the Government and Communists dwell on the contrast between the shelters of the rich and the homeless poor with inadequate protection. The motive alleged for the contrast is the desire of the Tory Government to save money at the expense of power.

Third, the absence of elections in an area where there is a small Tory majority and an active Labor party which resents the agreement not to contest elections during the war. In such areas Communist propoganda makes headway among enthusiasts to whom the inaction coalition implies is anathema. Fourth, the failure of the government to produce so far anything more than measures of temporary alleviation creates suspicion, in the light of memories of 1919, that Labor will rest content with empty promises of great reforms and wake up when too late. Where this is deeply felt, in South Wales for example, it provides fertile soil for Communists which they exploit with characteristic tenacity. It can only be counted, in my judgment, as and when the government produces a great program of social reform.

A PROPORTIONATE situation to almost a year and a half of war is, I think, pretty accurately measured by the recent Dumbarton by-election. In a straight fight between Labor and Communism, the Labor candidate polled 18,000 votes to 3,000 by his opponent; and I gather that perhaps a third of the 3,000 votes were cast in terms of sectional rather than national issues. My general view is that the general morale of workers is as high as it has ever been; there is no serious threat to national unity. But I conclude also that the alliance between Churchill and Labor is not, on its present basis, likely to last beyond victory.

End In Sight

Lend-Lease Status

THE FIGHT on the lease-lend bill is over. It is over in the sense that the bill is about to be enacted. And it is over in the sense that the bill has been brought to a form which meets all the germane and important objections made to it.

With amendments adopted by Senate or House or both, all practically certain to stand, the lease-lend bill comes down mainly to this:

The President may transfer to Britain (or other countries) $1,300,000,000 worth of armament already in existence (or now in process of manufacture) and owned by our Army and Navy.

The President may similarly transfer armament manufactured in the future—provided Congress says he may; and only when and if Congress says he may.

As respects duration of the powers granted the President, the present form of the bill provides that:

All powers end, the whole bill comes to an end, on June 30, 1943.

The powers may end earlier. They end at any time when Congress passes a simple resolution saying they end.

Of all the amendments, the broad ones which reduce the bill to this simplicity, are two: One is the amendment introduced by Democratic Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia. This provides that, as respects the future, the President can transfer no armament to any other country—except after Congress has specifically authorized money for that purpose. Concretely, this Byrd amendment means that as respects the future, the President cannot transfer a rifle to any other country until after Congress has specifically voted the money for the manufacture of that rifle for that country. (An essential virtue of the Byrd amendment is that it retains in Congress the power of the purse, and therefore retains in Congress a continuing control over the aid-to-Britain policy, and over the Executive's actions.)

THE OTHER BROAD amendment that removes a wide area of objection to the bill is the one originally proposed by Republican Congressman Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois. This is the amendment which says that the whole bill will come to an end at any time when Congress, by a simple majority vote, passes a resolution to end it.

With the bill thus reduced by these broad amendments, it satisfies the great majority of those who have opposed it. It satisfies practically all who strongly wish to help Britain, but wish to do it with prudent safeguards. The bill in its present form largely meets the prevailing Republican point of view, as expressed by proposals of Senators Taft and Lodge and Representative Karl E. Mundt, of South Dakota. That point of view was to put the help to Britain in the form of a simple cash loan or gift. To a large extent, or even to a greater extent, the spirit of this point of view is met by Senator Byrd's amendment. By the Byrd amendment, our future help to Britain becomes in effect a serial loan, granted in installments from time to time in such amounts as Congress appropriates.

Even with the sweeping amendments adopted, there remain some opponents of the bill—some who either do not believe in help to Britain, or who believe in limiting the help even more than the present form of the bill does; or believe in building up our own defense with a view to remaining strictly within the American hemisphere, taking no account of the course of the war in Europe. These points of view are tenable—all who believe that way have a right to their beliefs. Their total number in Congress is not great. They have done a service, in that their attitude has helped to bring the bill to its present form.

WITH THE BILL in its present form, the debate in the Senate now is not, strictly speaking, over amendments to the lend-lease bill. The debate now is over amendments, or attempted amendments, to the Constitution of the United States—attempted amendments of the constitutional power of the President as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy. One proposed amendment would attempt to forbid the President to send any armed force outside the Western Hemisphere. But under the Constitution the President has power to send Marines, troops or naval vessels to any point on the surface of the earth or sea where American interests are endangered. To attempt to limit this constitutional power by an amendment to the lease-lend bill is, in the first place, not germane to the bill. It is an un-germane "rider" on the bill. In the second place, the attempt is almost certainly vain, because the Constitution can hardly be changed by an amendment to a bill in Congress. The same may be said, practically, about the amendment to the lease-lend bill which attempts to forbid the convoying of ships.

With the really important amendments agreed to, with the debate now reduced largely to what would amount to mere expressions of opinion by Congress about the President's use of his permanent constitutional powers—in this condition, Congress is free to give regard to the need for haste. Congress can make the help to Britain available quickly, both for psychological effect in Europe, important right now, and also for practical effect.

The $1,300,000,000 worth of equipment which becomes available to Britain immediately upon enactment of the bill, is large. The measure of it is that if all were used for the things Britain needs most, this amount of money could, speaking loosely, take care of about 100 destroyers, some 5,000 fighting planes, and some 400 cargo ships of 7,000 tons each.

Hatch Act Held Failure

Campaign Spending Shown Unchecked

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

THE SPECIAL Senate committee on campaign expenditures yesterday cited a minimum outlay of $22,716,793 by the Republican and Democratic Parties as proof that the Hatch Act was "ineffective in preventing the expenditure of enormous sums of money" in the 1940 campaign.

In its official report to the Senate the committee recommended Congressional study of legislation to place an "all-inclusive limitation" on total expenditures in behalf of Presidential candidates, including funds spent by State and national party committees and "independent" organizations.

The Hatch Act's $3,000,000 limitation on annual expenditures by national committees of political parties merely "served to direct the flow of campaign funds in excess of that amount into other channels," the Senate investigators reported.

Expenditures Revealed

Expenditures reported by the Republican National Committee, State committees and various independent groups came to $16,621,436, the committee stated, while the total reported by Democratic organizations was $5,095,357.

A "MUSHROOM growth" of independent political committees, "each of which believed itself legally entitled to spend up to the $3,000,000 limitation," and a tendency for State committees to assume part of the financial burdens of the Presidential campaign were the most notable results of the limitation imposed by the Hatch Act, the committee found.

The committee also suggested that Congress consider an all-inclusive limitation on individual contributions for political purposes in a single year.

The Hatch Act's $5,000 limitation on any individual contribution to a national political organization led wealthy persons to spread their donations among national, State, local and independent campaign organizations, the committee stated. The report cited contributions of $186,780 by the duPont family for the G. O. P. campaign and donations of $108,525 by the Pew family.

Beneficial Effect

AS A beneficial effect of the Hatch Act the committee stated that "not one complaint" of the use of relief funds for political purposes was received in 1940. The Hatch Act was adopted after a Senate investigation of charges that WPA funds were used for political purposes in the 1938 elections.

In outlining its ten-point program of legislative proposals, the report stated that no members of the campaign committee were individually committed to the specific proposals and recommended general study of the program by the Senate's standing committee on Privileges and Elections.

The campaign committee suggested study of legislation to ban "pernicious political activities" by county and township officials and committeeman on agricultural conservation associations, prohibit contributions by public utilities or other corporations regulated by the Federal Government or their officers to national campaign organizations and require that all campaign literature identify its sponsor and publisher.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, chairman of the committee, has already introduced legislation to carry out the campaign literature proposal.

The Gallup Poll

65 Per Cent of British Public Think U. S. Should Have Place at Peace Settlement

Princeton, N. J., March 7.—When the European war broke out 19 months ago, occasional British speakers reminded the United States public that so long as America remained a neutral in the war this country could expect no real part in the eventual peace settlement.

And yet much United States official policy has undoubtedly been based on the belief that America would have a part to play in a future peace. Much American public opinion, as well, has been anxious for an American role in such a settlement.

Now, from the studies of the British Institute of Public Opinion, comes an indication that if the Axis is defeated the rank-and-file of the British people themselves would like to see an invitation to the peace table go out to the United States.

"America is going to be needed in any future peace," the overwhelming majority of those interviewed in a new British survey say.

Others put it this way:

"America is already helping. Her aims are the same as ours. We can't have a lasting peace without America's help."

The British Institute of Public Opinion, an overseas affiliate of the American Institute of Public Opinion, asked business men, factory workers, country people and others in a cross-section of the British Isles:

"Do you think the United States should take part in the peace settlement after the war?"

Percentagewise the answers were:

America should take part .65%
America should not 15
Undecided or no opinion ..20

In a further question put to British voters, the wartime British Institute asked whether Eire "in her own interests," was right in refusing to allow Britain to use naval bases like Cobh, Berehaven and Lough Swilly.

The great majority of those with definite opinions said, in effect, "no—Eire is making a mistake."

While many voters sympathized with the Free State's desire to maintain her dearly-won independence in every possible way, the consensus was that if Eire's policy eventually allowed Germany to take over the bases she might never have them returned to her.

The replies were:

Eire right in refusing 14%
Eire wrong 63

Armed Norse Vessel Aground Off N. J. Coast

Ocean City, Md., March 7 (AP).—A tug heaved in vain in swelling seas and a blinding blizzard today to free an armed Norwegian freighter—flying the British flag—fast aground near here.

The ship, the Olaf Bergh out of Hull, England, to pick up a cargo in Philadelphia, was reported "in no immediate danger," but winds forecast to reach gale force smashed menacing surf against her.

Coast Guardsmen stood by to removed the 28 crewmen if necessary by breeches buoy from the shore a scant 100 feet away.

They said new efforts to float the 411-foot, 5,811-ton vessel probably would await high tide early tomorrow. There was danger, they added, that sand might bank around her before then. She ship grounded about 4:30 a. m. today.

On her deck were five machine guns and an antiaircraft gun.

King Anxious as Queen Inspects Tommy Gun

Somewhere in Scotland, March 7 (AP).—Queen Elizabeth borrowed a loaded "tommy gun" from a Polish soldier during a royal inspection trip along the Moors today, put it to her shoulder and squinted through the sights.

"Be careful!" King George warned.

She didn't touch the trigger.

The President's Wife

DO YOU MIND my taking up, in some detail, certain editorial reactions to a recent comment of mine on the activities of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt?

It has been intimated that, because Mrs. Roosevelt is a lady and wife of the President of the United States, good manners and good citizenship require that any discussion of her activities be couched in language less searching than would be appropriate to the activities of Burt Wheeler, for example, whose motives have been furiously impugned. Yet, Mr. Wheeler is a gentleman and a Senator, with a warrant from the people of his State, oft renewed, to represent them. Mrs. Roosevelt holds no certificate of election, but it seems agreed that she does partake of her husband's office, and I have heard no specific denial of the contention that she has used her position for private gain. What she does with that gain she will not specifically say. It could be put to uses of the Communist Youth Congress.

An important point of my discussion has been that Mrs. Roosevelt has actively participated in the drive to herd workers, against their will, into political organizations which would have the power to tax them, to limit their opportunities, to regulate their private affairs, to ostracize them forever from all employment and to prevent whole masses of them from working on national defense jobs.

That has not been denied. It is merely ungentlemanly to call attention to these conceded facts.

I HAVE SAID that Mrs. Roosevelt has no right to membership in the Newspaper Guild, which is dominated by Communists in the key offices, and that she is excused from the two most painful requirements of membership. Mrs. Roosevelt's ineligibility is plainly written in the guild constitution. The issue of Communism in the Guild has been fought over in the guild itself, and a resolution to condemn Communism was defeated in the last convention. And it was agreed, by Mrs. Roosevelt's own stipulation when she joined, that she should not be required to strike or picket. I have heard no challenge to these assertions, except on the ground that proper respect for a lady and her husband's office would forbid their utterance.

It can be said further, in this connection, that the precedent of waiving the strict requirements of eligibility has permitted the New York Communists, who actually run the guild, to increase their political voting power by admitting Communists who are no more eligible than Mrs. Roosevelt.

In New York a Communist furrier can qualify for membership as a journalist and, in some circumstances, can outvote an American reporter. And the Communist Party's official organ is given special immunity from the requirements by which the guild attempts to control or destroy the American press. Nobody has ever denied any of this.

On the occasion in question Mrs. Roosevelt had delivered a sympathetic address to a meeting of members of the Electricians' Union of the A. F. of L. This local a few months ago mobbed a detachment of New York police in an unprovoked riot.

It is modeled on the Communist pattern which endeavors to take over the management of industry. Its brother union in Chicago is notorious for corrupt leadership. And its brother union in Dayton, Ohio, is the one in whose behalf the jurisdictional strike was called which is crippling a vital expansion job of the Army Air Corps.

It was in this company that the wife of the President elected to say that American workers "ought to" joins unions.

IT WAS FURTHER said that because of her guild membership and her position, Mrs. Roosevelt is enabled to hold press conferences which produce sympathetic publicity. It is contended that membership in the guild does not affect the objectivity of a journalist, but the guild thoughtlessly threw away that argument when it required Chief Justice Hughes to quit the harmless American Press Society on the ground that he might favor that group in some hypothetical issue between the guild and the society in the future. If the Chief Justice could not remain impartial as an honorary member of the A. P. S., it is inconsistent of the guild to say that active guild men, loyal to the C. I. O., can't even be suspected of partiality to a member of their own organization.

I said Mrs. Roosevelt was not naive, that she was a clever politician of long experience and that she was actively trying to coerce American workers into collectives whose fulfillment would impose on the members the most binding elements of Communism and Hitlerism. I have heard, by way of reply, no denial, but only that it is bad manners thus to speak of the wife of the President of the United States.

Cure For Strikes

By Merlo J. Pusey

Mediation In Place Of Force

OUR FUMBLING METHODS of handling strikes in defense industries creates the impression that the United States doesn't know how to keep men on the job in an emergency. We seem to be going on the assumption that walkouts which delay the production of planes, tanks, ships and ammunition cannot be avoided without depriving the working man of his rights. That curious attitude has so taken hold of some officials that they prefer to minimize a potentially dangerous situation instead of facing up to it.

PUSEY

Actually, of course, governmental agencies have proved themselves adept at forestalling labor disturbances in past emergencies. There is no lack of effective means to curb strikes. Congress has but to choose the remedial method it wishes to put into effect. It doesn't need to experiment with untried formulas. To be specific, it could recreate the National War Labor Board, as suggested by Undersecretary of War Patterson, or, better still, it could set up a new mediation board to handle disputes in national defense industries.

AFTER THE United States entered the World War, the Government fumbled the problem of labor disturbances just as it is doing now. We had been in the war more than a year when a national board with sufficient power to iron out employer-employe disputes was finally set up. During that period a great deal of human energy which should have gone into our war effort was wasted. There was some excuse for fumbling then, for the country had never before encountered such an emergency. Similar excuses cannot be offered today.

The National War Labor Board became a sort of "supreme court for the determination of labor disputes in war industries." It had no legal authority to compel either employers or employes to accept its decisions, yet its influence was enormous. It laid down policies to govern the relations between employers and employes; it heard appeals from the decisions of various special agencies working in the same field, and it settled numerous disputes that could not be disposed of by other means. In part, it relied upon public opinion to give its decisions weight, but two employers who refused to recognize its jurisdiction found their plants commandeered. All but three of the awards made by the board were accepted by the disputing parties.

This board, of course, functioned under the pressure of war. It did not outlaw strikes or assume completely dictatorial powers. Since it was backed up by the President's war-time powers, however, it could readily crack-down upon uncooperative employers or employes. Industrial plants could be taken over; men could be told to work or fight. The present situation does not appear to demand such drastic measures. Yet crack-down powers may have to be employed if the present sporadic strikes reach epidemic proportions before Congress gets around to legislating on the subject.

The most hopeful aspect of the situation lies in the existence of another ready-made formula for the prevention of strikes. The pattern may be found in the Railway Labor Act. That pattern might well have been used in 1917-18 if it had been available at that time. But the act was not passed until 1926 and did not attain its present form until 1934. In no sense is the Railway Labor Act a crack-down measure. Yet it has virtually eliminated strikes by employes of the railroads and airlines. Only one strike among employes subject to the act occurred in 1940 and it was quickly settled.

Congress did not, of course, attempt to outlaw the strike by this legislation. Every American has a constitutional right to quit his job if he wishes to and that right cannot be taken away while we still cling to our traditional principles of government. Fortunately, there is no reason to consider taking it away. The history of the Railway Labor Act suggests that all we need is a reasonable method of settling labor disputes.

It is axiomatic that workingmen do not like to strike. Walkouts cost them heavily in lost wages. Usually they strike because that seems to be the only way of securing adjustment of their grievances. The strike has been virtually eliminated from the railroad industry because Congress provided a more satisfactory way of settling disputes. In the first place, the act created adjustment boards to reconcile differences as to wages, hours and working conditions arising under employer-employe agreements. Then it prescribed an elaborate formula by which major controversies between the unions and the managements may be settled.

The act imposes a positive duty on both employers and employes "to exert every reasonable effort to make and maintain agreements concerning rates of pay, rules, and working conditions and to settle disputes" without interruption of their services to the public. When disagreements arise, the parties must give notice and fix dates for conferences. If they are unable to settle differences between themselves, the National Mediation Board may be called in. If it is not called, that board must proffer its services. If experienced mediators assigned to a case fail to bring about an agreement, the board members themselves may take a hand in it. Then if a settlement cannot be effected, the board must urge the parties to submit their differences to arbitration.

Much has been said recently about the so-called cooling-off period required by this act. It is not cooling-off that settles strikes, but hard work around the conference table. The carriers and unions are required to give 30 days' notice of any intention to change the conditions of employment. That rule is important largely because it automatically invokes the conference table technique. Even more important is the fact that while negotiations go forward, employers are under obligation not to alter wages or working conditions, and employes not to strike. The danger of a flare-up resulting from arbitrary conduct is thus reduced to a minimum.

Usually this methodical appeal to the conference table is successful. When it fails to settle a dispute which threatens to interrupt interstate commerce, the Mediation Board notifies the President, who thereupon appoints a special board to investigate and report on the dispute. Once more the disagreeing parties are forbidden to change the status quo (except by agreement) until at least 30 days after the investigators have made their report to the President. Workers are thus under obligation not to strike until every possible effort has been made to settle the dispute. But in the meantime they are protected against arbitrary changes in their working conditions.

The outstanding success of this procedure in preventing railroad strikes justifies its application to defense industries. To date the conference table method with all that it implies has not been given a fair trial. It would be a travesty on American democracy if a harsher means of curbing strikes should be adopted without a sincere attempt to make scientific mediation effective. And it would be national suicide to let the rising menace of strikes develop into a major brake upon our defense efforts for want of constructive Government leadership toward the peaceful settlement of disputes.

Fling out the banner! let it float
Skyward and seaward, high and wide.
The sun that lights its shining folds,
The Cross on which the Saviour died!

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This ringing trumpet call, pulsating with a vigorous spirit of heroism, —was written for a flag-raising ceremony of a girls' school. The banner figure was inspired by the passage from Psalms, "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear Thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Busy Women's Convertible Coiffure

Practical, flattering and convertible are the new bang coiffures. With a swish of the brush and a twist of the comb you can change from bang to pompadour or to a modified upswept. You can do this with one intelligent job of setting. Lana Turner, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, illustrates here two ways of coiffing the same hair-do. Above left—Profile view shows inverted bangs across forehead, upswept on side while the crown is kept smooth. Above center—Lana sweeps her bangs into a modified pompadour. A soft wave breaks severity of line across front and sides. Above right—She transforms her pompadour into soft bangs showing just a trace of wave across the forehead. Reversible roll covers nape.

Skin Care Called English Women's Beauty Secret

Excellent care rather than favorable climatic conditions is the real secret of the average English woman's clear, radiant complexion. This is the opinion of Miss Molly Gilroy, of London, representative of a famous New York cosmetic firm. In town this week at one of the local stores she gives expert advice on care of the skin as well as corrective make-up. She specializes in 'teen agers problems.

"A few years ago," said Miss Gilroy, "English women became weary of hearing that American women were better looking and more chic than they. So first they set to work on their complexions. They did such a thorough job of it that soon they out-rivaled the American women—at least until the war started."

Now that it's no longer smart to wear silk stockings, rouge and lipstick in London, English women nevertheless still cleanse and lubricate their skins nightly, according to Miss Gilroy. In fact, when the war first started they bought up all the cosmetics available. They put so much stress on them that the English government put restrictions on the amount one person could purchase.

"The three basic rules of skin care for any woman or young girl are: use of a complexion brush, immaculate cleanliness and lubrication," explained Miss Gilroy. By the way there's a special sale on "Young Skin Preparations" now at a local store. "Adhere to these and you can clear up a dull, pimply complexion." To encourage skin care among boys as well as young girls, this expert gives special attention to the problems of young boys as well as girls who seek her advice.

Married Man From Out of Town Persuades Business Associate and Wife to Pass Him Off as Bachelor To Girl Friend of Theirs; Was This Wrong Move?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recently, my husband and I had occasion to entertain a man from the West,—a man who has long had business dealings with my husband. His wife came with him last year, but this time he came alone. In discussing plans for the evening, he asked us to "get a date" for him, and not to tell the "date" that he was married; that it would be all in a spirit of fun.

I did not like the idea at all, but finally I telephoned a girl friend and asked her to join us for dinner and go on with us later to a night club. She accepted the invitation, and she doesn't yet know that her dinner partner was a married man. I do not approve of my part in the proceedings, but my husband tells me not to worry. He says we are not responsible for another person's social behavior.

Perhaps I am to serious minded. Perhaps I should just casually tell the girl the truth of the matter, trusting to her sense of humor to see it in the right light. What do you think? ALICE.

Theory Underlying 'Formal Introduction'

DEAR ALICE: Your misgivings about the ethical propriety of your behavior in this instance are fully justified, in my opinion. The theory of the "formal introduction" is that the person who effects the introduction is vouching for the integrity, the social trustworthiness, of the individuals he is making known to each other. Hence society's traditional assumption that anyone met through the deliberate intermediary offices of a friend is a "respectable" person; a person who is exactly what he seems, or represents himself, to be.

In asking you and your husband to present him to some girl of your acquaintance, in the guise of a bachelor, this "man from the West" was dishonoring the very friendship upon which he presumed. He proclaimed himself untrustworthy and asked you to stoop to his level of conduct. In obliging his vulgar request, you were not only deceiving your girl friend—almost as much as if you had given her the lie direct—but you were also playing the man's wife false. Since she has met you as "friends of her husband," and very likely has been entertained in your home, I am sure she would expect more honorable dealing from you, when her back is turned.

Having impulsively committed the girl to an acquaintanceship which rests on a false premise, it seems to me you have a moral obligation to undo that mistake by telling her the truth of the matter. You can, of course, make your amends with a light touch—perhaps by telephoning her and asking her how she liked Mr. So-and-So, and then going on to say something to the effect that, "I've just got to let the cat out of the bag. He's married, you know; but he made us swear we wouldn't tell you; at least, not until the evening was over. His wife was here with him last year, etc., etc."

You may say, if you like, that you've been suffering a guilty conscience ever since humoring his silly request; not that it could have made any difference to her, of course, but because you just don't believe in dealing in riddles; that it goes against your grain. Assure her that the next time you call her to join you for dinner, it will be to meet a real, live bachelor and no more playboy married men. Sign off by thanking her for going through that evening so graciously and for being such a good sport about it all—and then forget the incident altogether. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Newest Frocks Make Exercise Fashionable

By Ida Jean Kain

Fashion insists that figures be spare through the middle and frocks are fitted so smoothly that a bulge over the diaphragm is practically fatal. Not only that, but the tummy must be as a flapjack.

It has come to a point where exercises is the style—and that makes it a necessity, from the feminine viewpoint. You may not need an entire set of calisthenics, but you can't do without a few midriff slimmers.

If you will take just 10 minutes a day for this type of exercise you can build up the muscular control which will prevent your figure from going every which way through the waist and tummy.

Since you don't want to spend too much time putting your waistline in its place, you must make every move count, so be accurate and thorough.

Begin With the 3-Way Stretch

Let's begin with a three-way stretch that will nip you in almost before you know it:

Lie on the back on the floor with the arms down at sides and legs straight down. Fling the left arm up and back on the floor, and, simultaneously, stretch the left leg across the right and touch toes to the floor beyond. Then return left leg and arm to starting position and perform the same exercise with the right leg and arm. Keep it up, alternating sides, and put rhythm into the movement. Repeat thirty times.

When you have finished, just relax for a minute, then go on to this one:

Roll over, face downward, and lie at full extension, the right arm from the shoulder—keep knee and elbow straight—and roll across the front of the body to the left side. Now, raise the left arm and leg and roll back to the right side. Raising the limbs gives you more momentum—and adds a stretch that speeds up results. Keep rolling for 10 counts each side. This exercise is guaranteed to slim and flatten.

For the Waistline

Here's a third one for the waistline duffel:

Over on the back again, with arms straight up on the floor back of the head and legs straight down. Without bending knee or elbow, touch left fingers to left toes. When you get so you can do that easily, try touching right fingers and left toes.

Done accurately, there's no waste motion about these exercises and they will slim the waist and flatten the tummy double quick.

The Two-In-One Wraps

The coat that is really a cape—that's the paradox about a wrap for spring. Whether it's a question of being true to the Navy, or just for comfort's sake, capes are sweeping the country. They are tailored similarly to a coat, but instead of slipping your arm into a sleeve, there is the casual convenience of a slit. Here is a cape style that has captured the spotlight in fashion news. In Forstmann's Elgardeen, it is beautifully smooth, couturier-detailed, and fully lined. The matching sheer crepe dress is almost a complete wardrobe in itself. Basically simple, the gold metal belt is its only ornament and can be changed in a variety of ways.

New Chemical Makes Possible Fast-Color Blue

By Elizabeth McRea Boykin

The magic in "The Thief of Bagdad" is no more remarkable than the chemical wonders that come out of modern laboratories. In addition to the miracles we take now as a part of our every day world—electricity, radio and such like, we hear constantly of new and marvelous synthetics and chemicals.

The newest is a tenite dye that, for the first time, makes possible a really fast color blue. It is acetate dye, not subject to gas or atmospheric fading, as are other blues. Nor does it turn pinkish or off color under extreme light exposure. The new tenite dye covers a range of many tones from pale to deep, and will dye acetate rayon, nylon, wool and silk. Later it is expected that tenite dyes will be offered in other colors besides blue.

Another chemical marvel is a fabric made of soybean fiber, which is expected to be on the commercial market soon. Already it has been woven into experimental upholstery fabrics for automobile seats, combined in the proportion of 25 per cent of soybean fiber and 75 per cent mohair and wool.

Plastics constantly widen their scope. The recent furniture market exhibited plastic veneers for furniture, plastic welting on upholstered pieces, along with the already familiar plastic hardware and trim all-plastic furniture.

Glass is being woven into fabics that won't stain or burn, while plastics are being used instead of glass because they won't break. Neoprene is one substitute for rubber that won't decompose as quickly as rubber and so is better than nature's product for household uses. Upholstery filling and mattresses, on the other hand, are now being made of latex, a rubber product that is an improvement on hair and springs.

French Chef Suggests Exotic Lobster Dish

IT HAS been said that a French woman is as careful about excellent food being served in her household as she is about making her personal appearance as attractive as possible. And Washington women now may know first hand about the exotic dishes that the French serve since Pierre Bardet, former chef of the S. S. Normandie, has arrived here to co-chef with Paul Hawes at Normandy Farm.

Pierre Bardet

Chef Bardet has been chef on the French Lines for a number of years, and also chef at the Parisian cafe—The Cuphole—where artists, writers and Bohemians of the "Left Bank" have gathered for many years.

Chef Bardet talked of French food as I lunched with him recently at Normandy Farm. He gave me some recipes for dishes he is now preparing. The lobster dish—Lobster Roscoff—he told me about is an especially fine one to serve during the Lenten period when you want to have something special. Here are his directions for preparing it.

Lobster Roscoff

Place on a round baking dish a layer of artichokes cut from the bottom of the artichoke. Chef Bardet insists that only the bottom of the artichoke be used. Pour melted butter over the artichokes and garnish all with shrimps and then with Sauce Crevette. Heat in a wine glass of sherry, round pieces of lobster. Place the pieces of lobster on the artichoke bottoms that have been cooked in water with a pinch of salt and a dash of lemon juice until tender. Then spread over all Sauce Mornay. Place under broiler and let brown lightly. Truffles may be placed on top if desired. Serve the Sauce Crevette in a gravy bowl.

Sauce Crevette—Cook 1 pound of shrimp in water. When cold, pour over them one pound of butter which has been clarified. Put in a sauce pan over low heat, 4 egg yolks. Stir the yolks until they are thick but do not permit them to cook. Add the butter to the thickened egg yolks a little at a time.

Sauce Mornay—Place 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan. When melted add 2 tablespoons flour and let it cook without letting it brown. Add 1 pint of milk and let it cook slowly. After 2 hours of cooking put a pint of cream in and let it simmer until it thickens. When thick enough to spread place on top of the lobster.

Shiny Effect In Make-up

Hollywood, Calif., March 3.—Shunning her powder puff for a shiny countenance, Peggy Diggins, Warner Bros. player, was one of the most attractive girls at the studio's annual dinner dance last week. It's an innovation with Peggy to apply a bit of dark foundation cream to her face, blend it into the skin, then complete a makeup minus only powder.

The effect is a natural sunbronzed look very effective with the latest South American colors for evening. Peggy's silk jersey gown showed a full skirt of horizontal stripes and white top with off-the-shoulder neckline.

Farewell Parties Given For Dr., Senora Fuentes

By Carolyn Bell

Finding time to pack (and after eight years in one spot it's a pretty terrifying job) seems to be the major problem of the retiring Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, Dr. Rafael Fuentes and his dashing senora. This popular couple has been whirled about at a dizzy pace from one farewell party to another. Yesterday they lunched, had cocktails and dined with various groups of their friends.

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera were ranking guests at the luncheon given in honor of the Fuenteses yesterday afternoon by the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla. Later Dr. and Senora de Fuentes were the center of a cocktail party given by the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza. Still later in the evening the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Gazitua entertained a cozy group—there were only eight—for dinner in honor of the Fuentes couple. Ranking guests at this dinner were the Chilean Ambasador and Senora de Michels. Also there were the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos.

Dr. Fuentes has had only a brief glimpse—he was there three days—of Chile, where he is being sent by the Mexican government. It was some years ago that Dr. Fuentes visited there on his way from Rio to Mexico. He will serve as Counselor at the Mexican Embassy in Santiago. Their calendar is full today, but tomorrow they will rest—and pack. On Monday they will be guests of the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro at luncheon. On Tuesday Dr. Fuentes, his wife and two children, Berta and Carlos, will bid official farewell to Washington. After a brief fling in New York they will sail for Chile.

Pastorizas Hosts At Merry Party

Yesterday afternoon the Pastorizas' apartment in 2101 Connecticut Avenue was a bright spot in a snowy afternoon. Guests were thawed out with old-fashioneds made with Dominican rum—a treat in any man's language. The Minister, dapper and genial as always, led his guests to the miniature bar where they helped themselves.

Sharing honors with Dr. and Mrs. Fuentes at the farewell party were the Air and Military Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Zanni, who will leave the end of this month for their homeland. It was a small, informal party where seats were the rule rather than the exception. They sat on the twin sofas, striped in peppermint green and white satin, and admired the deep burgundy chairs and gold drapes. Senora de Pastoriza wore a simple gray crepe frock with a draped bodice. Senora de Fuentes was wearing her favorite black.

On Monday afternoon, the pleasant quarters of the Dominican Legation will be the scene of another gathering when about 70 Congressional wives "tour" the place. They will be greeted by the Minister and the Second Secretary, Don Sebastian Valverde, will deliver a speech on the Dominican Republic. Also making his appearance as a speaker will be the Pastorizas son, Andres, jr., who is also second secretary of the legation. Tea will be served later.

Mexican Envoy In Gathering

But to return to yesterday's party: Among the guests noted here and there were the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Najera the Ambassador of Colombia, Gabriel Turbay; the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Cuervo; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos; the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation and Senora de Vega; Dr. and Mme. Ricardo Alfaro, Mme. Espaillet, the Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy and Senora de Garland, the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron, the Counsel of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Rodiguez, the Military Attache and Senora de Munilla, the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Pardo and Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

Later many in the party gathered at the Sixteenth Street home of Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas where Mrs. Cajigas was entertaining at a surprise party for her husband who was celebrating his birthday anniversary. It was an informal supper party and guests were asked to come after 6:30 o'clock.

Stag Luncheon To Fete Dr. Fuentes

Strictly a stag affair will be the luncheon this afternoon at the Carlton in honor of Dr. Fuentes. Diplomats, State Department officials and "just friends" will gather to fete the popular Mexican. Among the guests will be the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy Dr. Eduardo Garland; the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Don Carlos A. Pardo; the Ambassador of Mexico, Dr. Castillo Najera and others from the staff are the second secretary, Don Raimundo Cuervo, another second secretary, Don Salvador Duhart; the Naval Attache, Commander Manuel Zermeno; the attache, Don Emilio Calderon Puig and Carlos Ansoiena.

Still others who are planning to attend are the Ambassador of Cuba, Aurelio Concheso; the Minister Counselor, Dr. Jose Barine; the Counselor, Dr. Vicente Rodriguez; the Commercial Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy; the Ambassador of Chile, Rudolfo Michels; the Minister of El Salvador, Dr. Hector Castro; the Minister of Bollvia, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla; the Minister of Nicaragua, Dr. Leon de Bayle; the Minister of Honduras, Dr. Julian Caceras, and the Minister of Costa Rica, Don Luis Fernandez.

Among others will be Don Alba, Dr. William Manger, Philip Bonsall, William Thomson, Eduardo Salazar, Henry O'Brien, Edgar Morris, Manuel Giron Cerna, Dr. Leo Brison Norris, Robert Knowlton, William Suro, Dr. James Moran, Dr. Victor Alfaro, Dr. Ricardo Alfaro and several dozen others.

Ovchinnikov, of the Soviet Embassy; Brig. John Holthouse, of South Africa; Mme. Wessel, wife of the Swedish Military Attache; Lieut. and Mme. Wennberg, of Sweden; Lieut. Capital Whirl

SECRETARY OF STATE Cordell Hull is the perfect example of how to get on with the gentlemen of the press while remaining the height of discretion. Proof of his popularity was the luncheon given in his honor the other day by the Overseas Writers Club. The luncheon marked the day on which Secretary Hull became the Secretary of State who has held that office longer than anyone in the history of the United States. A silver pen was presented to him as a souvenir of the luncheon and the toastmaster said that "for his tenure of office Secretary Hull was to be thanked and the Nation congratulated."

OF WIDE INTEREST is the Bazaar for Greek War Relief which is opening today at the headquarters of the British War Relief at 1018 Connecticut Avenue. The bazaar will last for a week and will have on exhibit and on sale examples of Greek art which have been carefully selected by Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Greek Minister; Mme. Depasta, wife of the Counselor of the Legation and by other Greek ladies. The articles chosen for the bazaar include fascinating Greek vases and pottery, colorful Greek embroideries, and some Greek carpets.

DONNA JULIA BRAMBILLA knows just how to mix human "ingredients" so that they are as stimulating as any cocktail. Under her guiding hand that prosaic function, a ladies luncheon-party, becomes an entertaining interlude. The other day at the 1925 F Street Club 14 ladies, including the hostess, sat at one big round table. Mrs. Warren Austin, whose husband is working in the Senate for all aid to Britain, was sitting next to Mrs. William R. Castle, whose husband is contrary-minded, and the two ladies were getting on famously. Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, of Boston, was seeing Hollywood through the eyes of her neighbor, entertaining Mrs. Lionel Atwill, and loving every minute of the conversation.

Mrs. Cabot Lodge and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, who study gymnastics with Prof. Emery Siposs, were teasing a third lady who is also his pupil because she was spotted by the professor one cold day as she walked along the street comfortably relaxed in her fur coat. From his car in the middle of traffic he shouted at her, "Tummy in, Madame!" and the poor lady straightened up with a fatalistic air and went briskly down the street without ever looking around at the doom which had overtaken her.

MRS. LODGE was being congratulated on the rapt attention with which her young son was regarding the activities of his father on the floor of the Senate the other day. He even seemed to be interested in what the other Senators were saying. Mrs. Lodge said that she hated to disillusion anyone but that the young man was at that moment surreptitiously making a paper boat which he sailed down onto the heads of the Senators the minute she turned her head away.

Our hostess looked most attractive in a simple gray frock and matching hat and in the whole group there was not one silly spring bonnet, though there were some very chic ones. Two of the prettiest were Lady Bailey's tiny black hat topped by a pink rose, and Mrs. Wigglesworth's wee Scotch cap of pink and gray plaid.

Miss Townsend Weds; Friends Are Surprised

Washington's biggest social surprise of the season hit the boards yesterday with the announcement that attractive Peggy Townsend and Martin ("Peter") Vogel, jr., had stolen a march on their many friends and were married yesterday morning.

The wedding took place in Camden, S. C., in the presence of a small company including Mrs. Martin Vogel, of Washington, and New York, mother of the bridegroom. When Mrs. Vogel did not appear at a party at which she and her niece, Baroness Stackelberg, were supposed to be joint hostesses Thursday afternoon, the report went the rounds that she was suffering from a touch of influenza. Meanwhile, however, she had gone South with her son and the bride-elect, whose engagement to another man, John Bond Rogers, was announced last month.

Rumors that the engagement of Miss Townsend and Mr. Rogers was to be made known this winter were first printed on this page last December. The formal announcement appeared February 19, and plans were almost completed for the wedding which was to take place the last week in April.

Former Fiance At Training Camp

Meanwhile, Mr. Rogers was ordered off to Army training in a camp in Georgia; and arrangements had been made that later this month Miss Townsend, accompanied by her fiance's mother, Mrs. John Alexander Rogers, of New York, was to look for an apartment in Savannah where she planned to make her home during the year Mr. Rogers is in training.

But somewhere along the line plans went awry. Peggy changed her mind. Peter Vogel proposed. And before even her closest friends knew about it, the couple was exchanging vows before a justice of the peace in Camden.

The report is not true that Peter Vogel and John Rogers were close friends, members of the family say. The two do know each other, having met casually in New York a number of times. But this case is not one in which boy-marries-best-friend's-fiancee.

To Make Trip To South America

The former Miss Townsend attended Holton-Arms School and was chosen Cherry Blossom Festival queen in the spring of 1939. In December, that same year, she made her debut at a tea given by her great-aunt, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend. Later, she entered the ranks of socially prominent night club singers, and also served as a professional model both here and in New York. She is 21 years old.

Mr. Vogel, who is a year older, is the son of the late Martin Vogel, who served for eight years as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury during the Wilson Administration and was in charge of the Liberty Loan committee during the World War. His mother, who formerly made her home in New York, now lives at 73 Kalorama Circle. Residing with her are Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, the latter her niece.

Mr. Vogel and his bride are expected to return to Washington soon before leaving on an extended South American trip.

The Hunt Country

Thomas T. Mott, M. F. H., of the Redland Hunt, has left nothing undone for the convenience of those taking part in the races, and since this is to be the first Point to Point event of the season, indications are that it will be a great day of sport.

Longitude, the hunter owned by Gerry Webb, of Middleburg and the winner of the Redland bowl last year, will go to Maryland to compete again this afternoon. Another good hunter from Middleburg, Mow-gli, owned by Crompton Smith, has also been entered in the races. Comedienne, owned by T. Beatty Brown, who will also ride, is entered in the "heavyweight race," last event on the card.

MRS. CHARLES M. McCORMICK, of Dover House, near Middleburg, has gone to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George C. von Beck, at Rockrest, Md. She has spent much time in the hunt country with her father and her aunt, Miss Nannie Fred. Miss Peggy Fred, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and only attendant for her sister. After an extended wedding trip which will include visits to Nassau, New York and Middleburg, Mr. and Mrs. Hedges will be at home after April 1 in their new home on Lookout Mountain near Chattanooga, Tenn.

Young men from the Virginia Military Institute who came to Warrenton from Lexington, Va., last Friday to join the Warrenton hunt last Saturday morning were very much disappointed that hounds could not be taken out because of the snowy weather. However, they had a good time at the many parties planned for them. Texas Club Observes State Custom

'Friendship Day' Marked; Members Of Congressional Delegation Honored

By Jesse Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Friendship day, an annual observance in Texas, was celebrated last night by the M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club here with a banquet at Hotel 2400. The club, named for the Texas woman who inaugurated the custom, last night had as its honor guests several members of the Texas delegation in Congress.

Representative Wright Patman, whose wife is a member of the club, talked on "National Friendship," emphasizing the importance of having this country united within in order to deal effectively with outside problems.

Reduction of poverty, ignorance and crime contributes to national strength and unity, he said, and there must be definite national policies that encourage friendship with other nations but he warned against any attitude which would ignore the destructive forces now abroad. It is imperative, he said, that the people of America be alert to the fact that Hitler hopes for world conquest. "We can't fiddle while Rome burns or sleep, like the Hessian army, while Washington crosses the Delaware," he said.

Brief greetings were extended by Senator Tom Connolly, Representative George Mahon, and Representative William R. Poage, whose wife also is a club member.

A tribute to "M. Eleanor Brackenridge as a friend" was given by Representative Paul Kilday, whose home is in San Antonio, where Miss Brackenridge lived and where her philosophy began.

Mrs. Erich W. Schwartze, founder and president of the club, formed the organization as an expression of gratitude for the scholarship established by Miss Brackenridge at the Texas State College for Women, of which she was an early recipient. The club, whose membership includes girls and women from all parts of the country who are now Washington residents, maintains a scholarship at the college. Miss Lorena Reed last night reported on the record of a Chicago girl who received the scholarship award this year.

Another feature of the occasion was the presentation of a portrait of Miss Brackenridge to the college. The painting was accepted in behalf of the institution by Jack Hubbard, son of Dr. S. J. Hubbard, president of the college.

Mrs. Schwartze opened the program by reading Gov. Lee O'Daniel's proclamation of Texas State Friendship Day. The Rev. John W. Rustin spoke on "The Greatest of All Friends," and the music included songs by Charles Haycroft and Mrs. Marie Deal, accompanied by Mrs. Elsie Weaver, and selections on the saw by the Rev. Glenn B. Faucett, accompanied by his daughter, Nancy.

Congressional Wives Meet Camp Fire Girls

Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, wife of Representative Plumley, of Vermont, and an officer of the Congressional Club, learning about the Camp Fire Girls' organization from three of the members. Left to right are Patsy Birge and Jane Brandt in their ceremonial costumes, and Barbara Segar in the Camp Fire service uniform

Camp Fire Girls of the Potomac Area yesterday afternoon presented the program for the weekly meeting of the Congressional Club at its clubhouse, New Hampshire Avenue and U Street. About 20 girls, with Mrs. Paul Ledig, former chairman of guardians for this area; Mrs. Harold Purvine, present chairman, and Mrs. Irene Caldwell, newly elected president of the local council, explained what Camp Fire work means to its members.

The program given by the girls was the same as that presented at the recent council meeting of the area. It illustrated their work in the seven crafts, home craft, health craft, hand craft, nature lore, camp craft, citizenship and business. They also explained the requirements for the four ranks, Trail Seeker, Wood Gatherer, Fire Maker and Torch Bearer. Girls participating in this part of the program wore their service uniforms—navy skirt, white blouse, red tie and navy beret.

Two others, Patsy Birg and Jane Brandt, in their picturesque ceremonial costumes, illustrated the campfire ceremonial. A sextet sang campfire songs.

The history of the organization was presented briefly by Mrs. Ledig. It was started here in 1912, the year it was launched as a national organization, she said, and continued until 1925 when interest lapsed. In 1933 she reorganized a group in Bethesda and, from that, it has spread to the District and Virginia with 30 groups, guardians and sponsors, and a membership of 500 girls in the Potomac area.

Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, president of the club, presided at the meeting. Following the program, tea was served. Pouring were Mrs. William W. Arnold, Mrs. Albert Vreeland, Mrs. Reid F. Murry and Mrs. John Lisinski.

Defense Given First Call On Nickel

Defense agencies acted yesterday to meet tight situations in crucial raw materials by imposing a formal mandatory priority status on nickel and neoprene, duPont-made synthetic rubber, and announced plans for setting maximum prices on scrap iron and steel.

Office of Production Management officials disclosed that tungsten priorities were probable within a short time and that the question of priority status for tungsten steel and nickel steel was also under consideration.

The action on nickel and Neoprene, announced by OPM Priorities Director E. R. Stettinius, jr., follows similar steps taken in the past weeks for machine tools, aluminum and magnesium. It places orders for Army, Navy and British requirements on a preferential basis, to be filled by producers before output is directed to nondefense needs.

Public to Feel Step

The order concerning nickel, it was believed, will probably restrict its use to the point where very little will flow to nondefense channels. It was thought that the effect on the civilian consumer will be more readily noticeable than the preceding priority declarations, owing to the wide use of the metal in nickel-plated utensils, household and plumbing fixtures and other accessories.

Civilian effect of the order on neoprene, it was indicated, will be negligible.

The action to determine ceiling prices for iron and steel scrap was announced by Leon Henderson, chief of the Defense Commission division of price stabilization. He said that a set of geographical and grade differentials had been submitted to the industry and that following the receipt of criticism and discussion, "there is no doubt" that a schedule of maximum prices at various points in the country would be established. All of these will be below $20 a ton, Pittsburgh, he added.

Secret Sales Reported

Although quoted prices for scrap have ranged near this figure, officials of Henderson's division said that the market was not accurately reflected by such quotations and that sales have been taking place behind closed doors and at prices well in excess of the $20 limit.

Previous ceiling prices have been issued for second-hand machine tools and scrap aluminum.

In warning that priorities on tungsten were in the offing, OPM officials indicated that present supplies might prove to be inadequate even for Army needs.

Catholic U. Observes Feast of Thomas Aquinas

The feast of St. Thomas Aquinas, patron of Catholic schools, was observed at Catholic University yesterday. Classes were suspended for the day, and students and faculty attended mass in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

The Rev. Dr. Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the university's school of philosophy, was celebrant at the mass, which was in the Dominican Rite, an observance which has remained unchanged for 700 years. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Slavin, O. P., instructor in philosophy.

Father Slavin, stressing the humanity of St. Thomas, said the university rededicates itself to its patron saint. "His towering intellect frequently obscures the humanity of the man who refused to enshroud himself in an ivory tower but rubbed shoulders with vital pulsating problems and brought to their solution all the realism of one tremendously in love with life. Thomas Aquinas belongs to us because he was human," Father Slavin said.

Infant Donates $5 to 'Big Boys' Club Campaign

An as yet unnamed baby boy, born Thursday, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. George Wenzel, contributed $5 to the Police Boys Club Campaign Fund through his grandmother yesterday, at a report luncheon held in the Press Club Auditorium.

Various committees reported at the meeting pledges and collections totaling $12,579. This brought the current grand total to $76,628, with $23,372 still needed to reach the goal of $100,000 by next Tuesday.

Congressman "Cliff" Davis, of Memphis, Tenn., long-time friend of Superintendent of Police Maj. Ernest W. Brown, was guest speaker.

The Police Boys Club has done a great job in this city, Congressman Davis said. "You are making possible the greatest thing in life today—the building of human character." He said that he hoped to see the day when his own city and every city of any consequence in the country would follow the lead set by Washington. "Out of it will come a stronger citizenship and a happier mankind," he declared.

Charles V. Dulcan and L. Gordon Leech also spoke, expressing hope that the goal set would be realized by next Tuesday.

Funds poured in from varied sources. Howard O. Hunter gave the proceeds of an article written by himself in the amount of $25. Louis H. Nesline, proprietor of a Northeast restaurant donated the entire proceeds of a day's business—$107.

Last and final report luncheon is scheduled at 12:30 p. m. next Tuesday in the auditorium of the Press Club. In addition to the committee heads many of the associate workers are expected to attend.

Highest amount turned in at yesterday's luncheon was $3,374 from R. C. Mitchell's committee.

Storm Aids Strike to Halt Army Project

Work on the $750,000 defense construction project at the Army Medical Center here was halted entirely by the weather yesterday, and would have been suspended partially in any event by the still unsettled A. F. of L. strike.

Hopes for settlement relied yesterday on a meeting of contractors, the A. F. of L. Building Trades Council, and Labor Department conciliators, scheduled for 10 a. m. today. Meanwhile, no progress was announced yesterday by the Labor Department's conciliation service.

The contracting firm of Skinker and Garrett, a union concern against whom 300 A. F. of L. workmen walked out Thursday in protest against another firm employed on the project, reiterated yesterday that "it is a shame" and that "we are caught in the middle."

The strike, according to John Locher, secretary of the Washington Building Trades Council, was called in protest against the Army's employment on another job at the project of Sam Merando as a contractor. This firm employs both non-union and C. I. O. workers.

Washington Workers Trek Home Through Winter's Heaviest Snow

1. START OF A SNOWY TRAIL—Dismissed a half-hour early to make their way home, employes of the Department of Commerce plod behind some intrepid leader through the driving snow. Workers were in the middle of Washington's heaviest snowstorm of the winter as they stepped from office buildings late yesterday to board crowded street cars, start snow-bound autos, or try to catch a cab

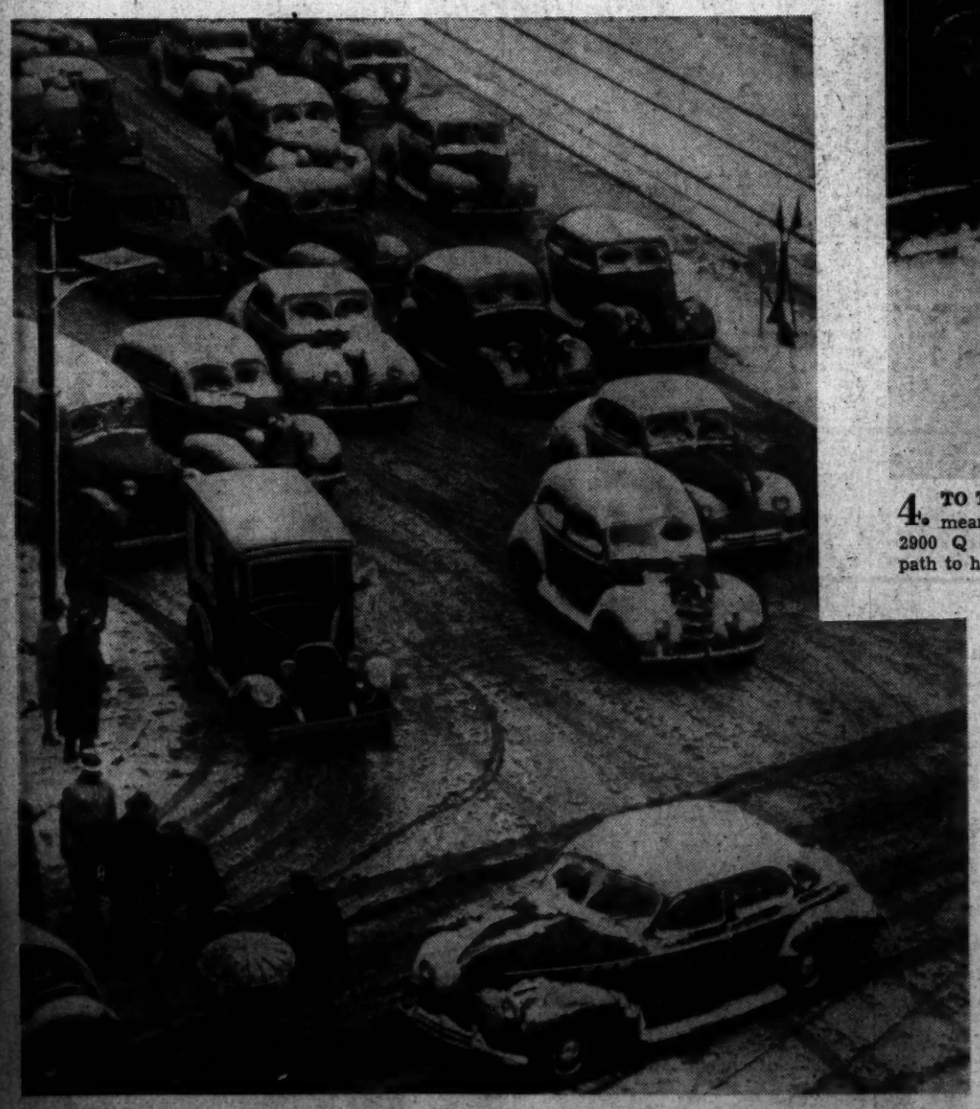

2. WORKING MOTORISTS who had parked their cars and entered offices before the snow began falling found their vehicles covered with a cold white blanket when they started for home after work

3. OFFICE COMMUTERS (top) who use the street cars waited impatiently for them to arrive as the record snow had crippled traffic. After moments of watchful waiting the rush was on and workers (below) pushed and shoved to get in first

4. TO THE YOUNGSTERS the snow meant fun. Willie Morris, 5, of 2900 Q Street Northwest, cleared a path to his front door

5. DRIVING WAS NOT FUN—Windshields were frozen outside and fogged inside. Traffic was jammed and any quick stop meant a skid and possible danger. The picture at left, made at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania Avenue, shows what drivers had to contend with. The autos at right couldn't make the grade at Thirty-fourth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Drivers had to get out and push

A Butler, or Just Bored?

He phoned to ask why the power was turned off. He was told that perhaps a tree or snow had downed the wires.

"What are you doing about it?" he asked. Told that we would like a story about it, he replied:

"Forget the story—my refrigerator won't work, and I need ice cubes for the highballs for the guests."

D. C. School Plan Wins Approval

Commissioners Realize Need for Expanded Facilities, McCoach Declares

The $2,000,000 school building program submitted recently by the School Board yesterday won the informal approval of the Commissioners.

Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner said, following a meeting yesterday with school officials, the Commissioners "realize the great need" of added school facilities, "particularly in the area east of the Anacostia River."

The program, which is in addition to the school program included in the Commissioners' 1942 budget estimates, now before Congress, calls for eight new elementary schools, need for which has been recognized by various studies and surveys by both municipal and school committees.

The discussion yesterday centered about methods of paying for the $2,000,000 program.

Col. McCoach, on Thursday, testified before a joint session that one way to meet the expansion of the city is adopting the Hunter-Overton fiscal formula, which would call for an increased Federal payment to the District.

Present at yesterday's meeting were: Commissioner McCoach, Assistant Engineer Commissioners Beverly C. Snow and John L. Person; School Supt. Frank W. Ballou, Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent; and G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent.

Chillum Heights Firehouse Urged

Chillum Heights Citizens Association last night urged construction of a fire department engine house in that area as a means of augmenting the community's fire protection.

Members asked that the engine house be erected on a strip of District property north of the United States Soldiers Home. The resolution also sought 50 additional firemen for the city's force.

The unit heard a discussion of Capital Transit Co. facilities in the area by a company official. Three new members were elected.

Extra Poundage or Years No Bar to Army Dance Girls

Registrars Liberal In Attitude Toward Feminine Charms

Don't worry about your age or weight girls, if that's been bothering you about today's registration for dance duty.

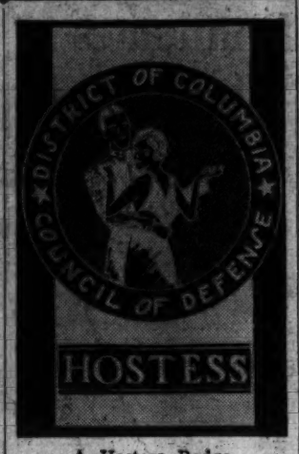

Archie Edwards, chairman of the subcommittee on Government Employes Service of the committee on welfare and consumer interest of the District Defense Council, in charge of the "draft," says there must be a heavyweight or two in the Army, and maybe some officers in camp would like an older girl as a dancing partner.

With the first floor of the District Building already wired for sound and movie cameras, the big program of registering girls for dance duty with national defense programs and for the men in uniform will take place at 1:15 p. m. today.

And the first 100 girls to register will be invited to a tea dance at the Arlington Cantonment this afternoon.

Volunteer registrars will join with committee members today to interview the hopefuls on the following subjects: height, weight, age, dancing ability (excellent, good, fair), telephone number and place of employment. The interviewer will then record, on the same form, his impressions on appearance and personality.

The next step is to give the girl a number which will be recorded on a punch card. Supervisors of the girls will be contacted for a report on the girl's "character, integrity, discretion and loyalty to the United States."

A Hostess Badge

Edwards says he expects to divide the city into zones, for example, the Northeast section would be Zone 1, etc. When a dance is held in that section of the city, girls residing there (and this will be shown on the card) will be called to duty. For dances at the camps, however, he will call for girls with numbers 1 to 200, if 200 girls are needed ad then for the next camp dance from 201 to 400.

Should the girls be a little shy about their age or weight, Edwards has instructed his workers to make a good guess.

'How to Keep Job' Primer Written for Congressmen

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Freshmen Congressman yesterday were studying in the Congressional Record a primer entitled "Is a New Congressman a Congressman?" or "Thirty-two Ways to Stay in Congress."

The primer was prepared by Representative Luther Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, one-time radio commentator.

The veteran of three Congresses volunteered advice on everything a Congressman should know except the social life of Washington.

"There is one problem somebody should talk with you about, but regarding which I can be of no help whatsoever," he said. "That is the social life in Washington. I understand that it can run into money."

Some of the "do's" and "don'ts" of the Patrick primer are:

"Avoid being too original."

"Do not try to compete with your Senator as to who can get a wire home first regarding the letting of a project in the district. The Senator will beat you every pop.

"Do not prophesy too fully as to the outcome of this war.

"No Congressman can rise above his secretary.

"Do not get up on the floor of the House and make any statements as to how the district you represent would vote on any given proposition. Gallup is waiting around the corner and may strike you next.

"Never get snooty or hard to get along with the newspaper boys . . . no matter how big a jackass a man in politics makes of himself, a newspaper man can always improve on it.

"Be extremely courteous, polite, and even chivalrous toward lady members of Congress. Any district that wishes to do so may send a lady—besides her husband was a very capable member of this body."

Patrick held out some hope to the new members when he pointed out that visitors are directed to the Capitol "for a good show."

"For some years we have been getting the worst of it on this side. The customers rush to the Senate. One of you may be the answer."

James L. Fort, FTC Attorney, Is Dead at 52

James Lynn Fort, 52, Federal Trade Commission attorney, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital.

Born in Americus, Ga., Mr. Fort was educated at Mercer University Law School. He came to Washington in 1910 as secretary to the late Representative Dudley M. Hughes, of Georgia. He also served as clerk of the House Committee on Education.

Upon outbreak of the World War, Mr. Fort enlisted in the Army and was subsequently commissioned a captain of Field Artillery. He was advanced to the rank of major.

He served as a special assistant to the Attorney General for several years after the war and later practiced law privately. Mr. Fort became affiliated with the Trade Commission after serving on the legal staff of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for several years.

He was a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and the Burleith Citizens Association. His home was at 3800 T Street Northwest.

Mr. Fort leaves his wife, Mrs. Marie Colcord Fort; a son, James L. Fort, jr., and a daughter, Sallie Bacon Fort, all of this city; three sisters, Mrs. Lynwood Jeffreys, Mrs. Mary Fort Colley and Mrs. Georgia Fort Askew, and a brother, Hollis Fort.

Funeral rites will be at 10 a. m. Monday at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Library Exhibits Hogan Collection

Forty early American books for children, selected from the collection of rare juveniles recently given the Library of Congress by Frank J. Hogan, Washington lawyer and former president of the American Bar Association, have been placed on exhibition in the library's rare book room.

Hogan began collecting the books, all of which were published between 1775 and 1860, a decade ago. One of the features of the collection, Archibald MacLeish, the Librarian of Congress pointed out, is its ten different editions of the "New England Primer," for 100 years more popular than all other juvenile books combined.

The exhibit is being shown in connection with a special project of the library to compile bibliographical check-lists of the works of approximately 100 American authors of juvenile literature.

Insurance Man Held in Maryland As 'Kiss Bandit'

A 37-year-old Washington insurance salesman, captured in Riverdale, Md., last night in connection with an attack on a woman, was held by the Prince Georges County police early today as a suspect in the College Park "kiss bandit" robberies.

He was caught by police after eluding Kenneth Crosman, 108 Jackson Avenue, Riverdale. Crosman saw the man run after hearing a woman scream as he was walking home from the movies with Mrs. Crosman. Corpl. Louis J. Mackall and Policemen Richard Pearson, Edwin Cissell and Edwin Thompson tracked him in the snow for a block to find him hiding under a house porch.

Mackall said he was identified by a woman living on Lincoln Avenue who said a man grabbed her as she was about to enter her home.

The "kiss bandit" has preyed on women living in College Park and University of Maryland coeds for weeks.

Schulte Plans New D.C. Tax Amendment

Would Exempt Nonresidents From Filing Returns On Their Income

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday said that he would offer another to the District income tax law amendments due to be considered by the House on Monday.

The Schulte amendment will seek to relieve nonresidents, and residents who hold legal domicile elsewhere, from filing a District income return. They would be permitted merely to present an affidavit that a State income tax had been paid.

At the same time Schulte stated that he would support the Hunter-Overton fiscal formula, which would raise the United States annual payment from $6,000,000 to $9,000,000 if adopted this year.

"If the States are to get the benefit of the income taxes from their legal residents in Washington," he explained, "the Federal Government should compensate the District for the loss of revenue."

The Schulte amendment is expected to be resisted by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, who will be in charge of the bill.

The amendment was rejected by the House District Committee last Monday when Schulte announced that he would fight the tax bill on the floor.

Hose Mystery Has Experts On Run, Too

A theory regarded as solving Washington's running silk stocking mysteries was questioned yesterday by one of the scientific detectives working on the case.

The theory, advanced by Traffic Patrolman Donald Ney, is that the stockings of Washington women were attacked and shredded February 18 and March 4 by dust from coal delivered on those dates to 1345 E Street Northwest, whose top floor is occupied by the Public Roads Administrator.

Howard Shearer, technician assigned to the Bureau of Standards by the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers, said yesterday that he "can't put much faith" in Ney's theory.

It was Shearer who charged the stocking trouble to "minute carbonaceous particles" with a high acid content, which "fused" into the stocking fibers. He said yesterday that coal dust would not be strongly acid, nor would it attack the stockings, even in a high wind, the way the "blitz" carbon did.

Meanwhile, H. K. Kugel, in charge of the District smoke inspection department, said that he had some of the damaged stockings, and also some samples of soot, from oil and coal-burning boilers in the section near Fourteenth and E Streets Northwest, where most of the damage occurred.

Kugel said he intends first to analyze the particles that caused the damage, second to duplicate the damage, if possible, by applying soot to stockings, and then to check back to the suspected source of the bill.

Littlefield Ballet Scores Hit in District

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Concert Association presents the Littlefield Ballet on Friday night in Wardman Park Theater. Program: Aurora's Wedding (music by Chaikovski), Cafe Society (music by Ferde Grofe) and Barn Dance (music by Guion, Powell and Gottschalk). Conductor: Jeno Donath.

Congratulations go to the Washington Concert Association for having chosen the Littlefield Ballet as the final offering of the season in Wardman Park Theater last evening, for the troupe of American dancers presented a performance technically excellent and consistently interesting in choreography. Although a little hampered by the limitations of the stage, the company made its adaptations so neatly that all proportions were preserved and no patterns were distorted. While the theater was not crowded, that was the misfortune of those deterred from attendance by the snowstorm, for the house was sold out, and the prospects of the association for the next season are rosy.

BROWN

A reading of the program before the curtains parted left one with a feeling of disappointment that the first ballet was Chaikovski's "Aurora's Wedding" which had been seen here so recently. But the disappointment vanished when Catherine Littlefield and her associates went through the familiar evolutions with a fresh vitality and a dancing skill most pleasurable to witness. The dancers were expert in elevation and in all the difficult technique of the traditional ballet. Particularly efficient and praiseworthy were Miss Littlefield and Carl Cleighton in the "Grand Adagio," and Dorothie Littlefield and Thomas Cannon in "The Bluebirds."

"Cafe Society," enlivened by some of the cleverest music that Ferde Grofe has written, was far better, both in choreography and in spirited performance, than "The New Yorker" of the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo. One reason was, of course, that these were Americans miming an American scene. But it was in Miss Littlefield's ingenious devices with types of character that the spectator found the secret of the ballet's dramatic consistency. The types have been picked not from cartoons but from life, and this produced the needed result of verisimilitude.

Individual dancers in "Cafe Society" who deserve special mention are Carl Leighton, whose combination of acrobatic feats with ballet technique as the intoxicated gentleman were extraordinary; Joe Johnson as the "champ" escorted from son ring to the night club by his admirers, and Hy Lowe as the prize-fighter's manager.

The closing ballet was "Barn Dance" with which the Littlefield name has long been associated. To this lively depiction of rural merry-making the accompanying music was perfectly appropriate, for it had been taken from the scores of David Guion, John Powell and Louis Moreau Gottschalk.

Pilot Saves Family By Circling Over Blazing Home

President Roosevelt has been asked by residents of Calhoun, S. C., to determine the identity of an Army pilot whose warning from the air saved a family from their burning home.

A letter to the President, published yesterday, disclosed the unknown flier's action. It declared that he aroused the inhabitants of a house that was ablaze by circling repeatedly over it at a low altitude until someone appeared. They just got out in time, because of his warning, it was said.

Army officials said they would try to find out the identity of the pilot, so the people of Calhoun could thank him.

One Girl Is Struck By Proofs of How Fickle Nations Are

The fickleness of nation to nation cropped up among all of Washington's impressive sights in the eyes of 17-year-old Louise Smith, a Cleveland, Ohio, high school senior here yesterday.

She is one of 210 secondary school students representing 60 schools in 16 States east of the Mississippi here to see their Government at work, and a pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery brought the situation to her mind.

"I saw," she said, "so many beautiful plaques there sent to us by nations we now aren't friendly with." The students at her school talk much of the war, she said, "but they don't want us to get in now because we aren't prepared and because we just got out of one." Her first hope is to have a glimpse of Secretary Hull.

Groves Cohen, 16, of Moultrie, Ga., was interested in national defense preparations—as his visit can show them—but was more interested in the snow, such a one as he never had seen before.

"It's pretty good coming down, but I imagine it gets right messy later on," he posed as a question. On what his school comrades think of the war: "They talk about it a lot and if our country gets in we're certainly going to fight."

The snow at Arlington impressed William Stecher, 15, of Overbrook, Pa., differently from the Georgian. "I was glad it snowed. It made everything about the Tomb so quiet and reverent," he said.

Two of the 210, Miriam Kujolic, of South Philadelphia, and George Dayton, of Cumberland, Md., were picked by lot to place the wreath on the Tomb. The students' ages average 17, and, earlier in the day Assistant Interior Secretary Oscar L. Chapman told them how his department functions and had them see the building. Today Secretary of Agriculture Wickard will tell them of his department's activities. Tomorrow (Sunday) they will attend chapel at the United States Naval Academy. Monday they will be recognized from the floor of Congress by Representative Joshua L. Johns (Republican), of Wisconsin.

"It's hard to say what we liked best," observed Luellen Hovy and Kathleen Womble, of Deatsville, Ala., together and with an incredible drawl. "Prettiest thing, though, is Gen. Lee's house, over there," said Kathleen. "It is," said Luellen. They referred to the Arlington Mansion.

Six District high schools sent outstanding students to the convention. They were: Herbert J. Slaughter, jr., for Anacostia; Betty Foote, Calvin Coolidge; John Palmer, Eastern; Elaine Novak, McKinley; Laurel Bolgiano, Theodore Roosevelt, and Pat Bursley, Woodrow Wilson.

D. C. Trainees To Quit Camp Lee For Fort Bliss

Col. Walter W. Burns, commanding officer of the 260th Coast Artillery, District Antiaircraft Regiment, now at Fort Bliss, Tex., reported last night 790 selectees will have left Camp Lee, Va., for the Texas post by Thursday. Addition of 1,100 trainees is to bring the Guard unit up to war strength.

The officer said 246 trainees entrained for Bliss yesterday, to be followed by 250 Monday and 300 Thursday. Burns will accompany the latter contingent.

After interviewing Capital trainees at Lee yesterday, Burns said the greater majority were men with special skills who could be assigned responsible posts in his regiment.

Fort Belvoir Area Warning Sounded

The War Department yesterday warned persons to keep off the military reservation at Fort Belvoir, Va., in the region south of U. S. Highway No. 1 between Accotink and Pohick Church, declaring it had been designated as a "continuous danger area," due to rifle and machine gun practice.

Hyattsville Gets Chance to Use New Snowplow

The town of Hattsville got its first look at its new snowplow in action yesterday when Superintendent of Roads William H. Brown put it to work on the main thoroughfares of the town. The plow, authorized by the council last fall, arrived just one day too late to be used during the last heavy snowfall in February.

Traffic on the overpass over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in Hyattsville was tied up for more than an hour during the afternoon when two large interstate trucks became stalled halfway up the south approach. Northbound autos were routed around the bridge by way of the Melrose grade crossing until the trucks were moved.

Property Of Church To Be Taxed

District Medical Society Building Also Placed on Rolls By Commissioners

Headquarters of the District Medical Society, 1718 M Street Northwest, and three rooms of the parsonage of the St. Luke's Parish of the Protestant Episcopal Church were ordered returned to the taxable real estate rolls yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The church proper and the parsonage, located at 1618 T Street Northwest and 1506 Sixteenth Street Northwest, were found to be properly tax-exempt with the exception of the three rooms, which a special investigating board declared were rented.

The board, which is investigating all privately owned tax free property in the District, has recommended more than $3,000,000 in property returned to the assessment rolls for taxation. In all cases to date the Commissioners have concurred.

The medical society property, exempted from taxation in 1921, is valued at $132,932 and will bring the District an annual tax of $2,326. The society, with other institutions restored to the rolls, may appeal to the Commissioners for a review within 60 days and thereafter to the courts, according to Walter L. Fowler, chairman of the special board and an assistant corporation counsel. Other legal heads, however, contend the institutions may take their case to the District Board of Tax Appeals after first making a complaint to the Board of Equalization and Review.

In its conclusion, the board said the medical society was not an institution of "purely public charity." The society's yearly income is exempt from taxation by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

In other findings the board found four additional cases properly tax exempt. These follow:

The Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church for properties at 1500 Sixteenth Street Northwest, 2800 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, and 1510 Sixteenth Street Northwest; American University for downtown offices and classrooms, 1901-1907 F Street Northwest; Goodwill Industries of Washington, 1214-1222 Hampshire Avenue Northwest, and the Universalist General Convention for the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest.

Buddy Lewis Faces Immediate Call to Army

Draft Papers Must Be In By March 10

Star Third Sacker Undecided Whether To Ask Deferment Until Season's End

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 7.—Uncle Sam tonight threatened to have the last word in reshaping the Washington infield for 1941. Third Baseman Buddy Lewis received his Selective Service questionnaire in the mails.

The unmarried 24-year-old Lewis was instructed to return the questionnaire to the local draft board at Gastonia, N. C., before March 10.

Tonight Lewis was undecided whether he would ask for deferment. He said he could claim his parents as dependents, but was willing to enter service immediately if called.

"Before I left Gastonia, the draft board advised me that I was not due to be called before July or August," said Lewis. "If I ask for deferment, it would be only until the end of the season.

Battle for Four Berths

Battles for four positions have developed to enliven the proceedings in the Washington training camp. At this date, Manager Bucky Harris is unable to name with certainty (1) his pitching staff, (2) his first baseman, (3) his second baseman and (4) his left fielder.

It was as a "set" ball club with the exception of the pitching that the Washington squad went into training here three weeks ago, but surprise factors have entered the picture.

Harris had assumed that Ben Chapman would be a fixture in the Nats' outfield, but there is now the threat that Georgetown's Joe Mellendeck will oust Chapman from the left field job.

Mellendeck's power hitting may win him an outfield post, and if it does the man he will replace is Chapman, who appears to be the most vulnerable. In centerfield, Roger Cramer is a standout, and George Case has no challenger for his rightfield berth, but Chapman, who batted only .286 last year and is no longer a base-stealing flash, has only a tentative grip on the leftfield job.

Good Defensive Player

On the frequency with which Mellendeck is able to make his hits will depend his fate (and Chapman's). The former Georgetown football star already is acceptable as a defensive outfielder and he packs more power than Chapman, but his talents against big league pitching are as yet unproven.

At second base, Buddy Myer has insinuated himself into the reckoning with a new-found friskiness despite the fact that next month he will be 37. Jimmy Bloodworth's slowness and his mere .245 batting average of last season do not intrigue Harris, and if Myer's seeming rejuvenation is not phony, then the old fellow might wind up with the second base job, at least until he is wearied by constant play.

On the Nats' need for punch hinges the outcome of the first battle between Jack Sanford and George Archie. Until the last week, the job seemingly belonged to Archie, who came out of the Coast League with a .324 average and the league's most valuable player award. His actions around the bag in the Nats' early workouts were downright brilliant and there is little doubt here that he is a clever first baseman. But Archie's hitting against big league pitching is as yet unproven, and his blows will not be of the long-distance break-up-a-game variety.

Sanford, rated as a natural hitter, gets more power in his blows and the Nats may feel the need for such power even at the sacrifice of defensive skill around the bag. Harris will keep an open mind about first base until he is able to sum up the performances of Archie and Sanford in the 15 exhibition games.

Hurling Jobs Wide Open

The pitching jobs on the club are wide open, with at least four of the raw rookies in camp certain to be retained at least until the club returns to Washington. Harris is counting on carrying a staff of nine, and even with a stretch of the imagination can count only seven who are certain to stick. They are Dutch Leonard, Ken Chase, Sid Hudson, Danny MacFayden, Walter Masterson, Arnold Anderson and Alex Carrasquel.

The dozen rookies out of the Class B and D leagues will get their tests in the exhibitions. At this writing,

Bill Jurges to Get Head Checked by Mayo Bros. Clinic

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 7.—Eddie Brannick, secretary of the New York Giants Baseball Club, said today Shortstop Billy Jurges, injured last season, would fly to the Mayo Brothers Clinic at Rochester, Minn., for an examination.

Manager Bill Terry, Brannick said, urged Jurges to undergo the examination and that the player would leave on the first available plane, probably early tomorrow.

Jurges, hit on the head by a pitched ball, has been working out with the Giants in spring training here, but was reported to have had dizzy spells.

Skeeter Defenseman and Goalie Provide Big Obstacle to Eagles

Eagles Bow To Skeeters Here, 2 to 1

By Walter (Puck) Haight

Twelve hundred dyed-in-the-snow hockey fans made their way by dogsled to the Riverside Stadium last night and then mushed home after seeing the Washington Eagles look like flamingoes as they bowed to the River Vale Skeeters, 2-1. The Eagles, for the most part, seemed to be saving themselves for the junior prom or something. According to hockey regulars, they were a listless lot in the early stages of the game. About the only thing they excelled in during the first two periods was breaking sticks.

However, in the final period, the Eagles began to play for keeps, but they succeeded only in escaping what would have been the first shutout they ever absorbed on their home ice. Gordon Pranschke, seemingly wrapped in a blanket of Skeeters a moment before, found himself free, in front of the goal and with nothing between him and a point but Goalie Lessard. Pranschke swung like a golfer and definitely scored.

Three In on Play

Although it looked like a one-man job, the boy who calls them in the press box gave assists to Courteau and Dewey. He might as well made it Haight and Haight, which might not have been a bad idea, if you know what I mean.

Goalie Lessard might as well have tried to flag an express train with a red pencil as stop Pranschke's shot, but he was the man who clipped the Eagles' wings. The Washingtons were playing "Beat Me Daddy Eight to the Bar" on Brother Lessard's carcass all through the third period, but with the one exception he was always the "in the way" kid. The Eagles just couldn't get the puck in for the tying score, although they did hammer Capt. Bill McGregor, of the visitors, into their own net.

In the first period, teh Eagles looked like fugitives from the duck pond at the Zoo, at least the so-called hockey experts told me. They skated well, came from good families, but they were just a bunch of hams with sticks in their hands. Neither goalie had much to do, so ragged was the passing. I was just about to try to get up a three-handed game of rummy when the Skeeters started firing. Brother Hemming, tender of the netting for the Eagles, had to slide this way and that way to ward off Skeeter scores.

Skeeters Take Lead

After 19 minutes, Hemming went that way when he should have been going this way and Eddie May banged the puck home for a 1-0 River Vale lead. The Skeeters were handling the disc like a hot potato at the time so I had to take somebody's word for it that Nichols and McGregor were worthy of assists on the play.

The Skeeters' second point reminded me of one of Rube Goldberg's cartoons of the inventive sort. I guess the puck is quicker than the eye, but it looked to me as if it was scored by the manufacturing company that makes the sticks. The official scorer credited it to Grivel on assists by May and Tobin. What happened is this: A River Vale player was trying to hit an Eagle over the head and thet puck came

Soose Defeats Vigh; Gets Overlin Fight

Middleweight Championship Bout Is Set for May; Abrams Whips Welch in Garden Ring

By the Associated Press

Soose weighed 162½, Vigh, 160½.

A month to the night after he had won a disputed verdict over the stocky battler from the Hudson River Valley Soose left no doubt at all of his superiority as he dropped Vigh for a count of six with a smashing right in the first round and went on from there to pile up a tremendous advantage on points.

The Associated Press score card showed nine rounds for Soose, two for Vigh (the second, when he made a fine recovery, and the sixth), and one even, the seventh.

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced Soose would meet Ken Overlin, of Washington, D. C., in a 15-round bout for the middleweight title, New York division, in May. The boys will sign the papers tomorrow and the date will be named in the near future.

Soose was fighting under the burden of a 30-day suspension by the New York State Athletic Commission, but it didn't seem to weigh very heavily on his shoulders. The contract had called for both men to come in at 160 pounds, give or take a pound, and Soose was 1½ pounds over the limit.

Vigh in a Daze

Mainly it was Soose's left hand that was on exhibition before a crowd of 12,341 that paid in $27,942. It would flick straight out into Vigh's pudgy nose and then come lashing back again. It kept the blocky boy from Newburgh off balance, jarred him back into the ropes just as he'd start to come in, and generally was so good that Soose's second appeared justified in telling him:

"You use that left! If you use anything else, I'll break your arm."

Kansas Coach Charges NCAA Sells Fair Play

By the Associated Press

Lawrence, Kans., March 7.—Phog Allen, phrase-making Kansas basketball coach, charged today the National Collegiate Athletic Association was "selling its fair-play rights for gate receipts."

In the same breath he declared he was "not interested in the play-offs sponsored by the N. C. A. A.—an outfit of money grabbers." His own Jayhawks were runners-up last year and are in the running this season.

Allen asserted selection of the Wisconsin Field House for the Eastern N. C. A. A. play-offs gave the Big Ten champions an unfair advantage. The selection was made by H. G. Olsen, Ohio State coach.

"The whole purpose of the play-offs is to give every team an equal advantage. Olsen is looking at it from the money he will draw as a result of holding the tourney at Wisconsin."

Allen reported that last year—when he was in charge of both the Western and National N. C. A. A. finals at Kansas City—the organization profited $9,000 "and the bigwigs of the organization wanted to give the colleges no money whatsoever."

George Edwards, coach at Missouri and Allen's successor as manager of the two 1941 play-offs at Kansas City, said all teams competing in the N. C. A. A. last year received their expenses and that Kansas and Indiana, the finalists, also were paid approximately $750.

C. U. Boxers Down Miami On 2 Defaults

Special Dispatch to The Post

Miami, Fla., March 7.—Catholic University's strong boxing team broke even in six bouths with University of Miami and won two points by defaults to take five three-round verdicts from Hurricanes.

Bill Totterdale, who won his last bout, was cheduled to meet Catholic's unbeaten captain, Gerry Strang, 165-pound division, but Totterdale was ineligible because of scholastic difficulties. The Hurricanes had been without a 155-pounder all season.

Bartone Winner

Leonard Bartone's aggressiveness gave him a win over Miami's Francis Christie in the 127-pound class and looked as if Washingtonians might rout the locals.

But Joey Church, Miami veteran and former Olympic star, utilized his greater experience to whip Leo Gaffney in the 135 division. Church had game opponent groggy in latter stages.

Georgetown Dominates Whole Show

Rice's Wolcott Misses Event as 250 Stars Compete in Annual 5th Regiment Games

By Jack Munhall
Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, Md., March 7.—Athletes from the District of Columbia and environs dominated tonight's annual Maryland-Fifth Regiment Games as Freddy Wolcott, Rice Institute hurdler billed as the star performer, missed the meet when his plane was grounded at Fort Lambert in Robertson, Mo., due to snowstorms.

Al Blozis, the invincible Georgetown shotput thrower, and Jim Kehoe, the Washington Athletic Association middle distance ace, both set impressive meet records as the D. C. entries accounted for four of eight new meet records. In addition, Georgetown's small but mighty array captured both the collegiate and A. A. U. team championships.

Blozis Sets Record

Blozis established a new South-Atlantic record of 54 feet 10 inches with the 16-pound ball, and Kehoe whipped two of his keenest middle-distance rivals to set a meet record of 1:22 in the Oriole 600, one of the featured events of a card that drew some 250 athletes.

Blozis, the 6-foot 6-inch 345-pound football star, wasn't out to break his national indoor record of 55 feet 8¾ inches, and was forced to do better than he had intended by the continued improvement of his frosh teammate, Earl Audet, who tossed one 53 feet 4 inches, the best throw of his career, to take second place.

Kehoe's victory, his second major triumph of the indoor season, was heightened by the fact that in winning he beat Sanford Goldberg, the Millrose A. A. "flying fireman," and Charlie Beetham, former N. Y. A. C. star running unattached.

Following out his prerace strategy of getting to the front as quickly as possible, the slim Kehoe took the lead from North Carolina's Dave Morrison halfway through the first lap and never relinquished it.

Alnwick Scores

Mort Alnwick, workhorse of the Georgetown University squad, accounted for the first individual meet record of the evening when he won the collegiate 440 in 50.9 to smash a mark set jointly by him and George Tucknott, also of Georgetown, last year as each was timed at 51.2 in capturing his section.

Soon afterward another meet record fell to District of Columbia athletes as Catholic University took the Mason-Dixon 880-yard relay in 1:38.4, clipping one-tenth of a second off the mark made in 1940 by Washington College. The Cardinal team of Charley Moutenot, the football ace, Vincent Campanella, Charlie O'Keefe and Johnny Weschler, in that order, won with 40 yards to spare over Johns Hopkins. Randolph-Macon, was third with Loyola fourth.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 7.—The Kid is 67 years old now, bald as a singed crystal and learning how to use his third set of store teeth, but he still bristles like a bantam and vows that big league ball players are getting soft. Norman (Kid) Elberfeld, who saw more high-riding spikes than any ball player of his time still has the wounds to prove it, hasn't changed much.

"The big leagues are full of putty-scalps," the Kid was saying to Clark Griffith at Tinker Field today. "Medwick gets beaned last season and is out for three weeks. This Jurges who was beaned last year still has dizzy spells and has to go home. I was hit in the head three times in one ball game and got two for two in the late inning."

POVICH He lifted a trouser leg to reveal his longest and ugliest spike wound. "That's a souvenir from Ty Cobb, the first time he ever slid into second base when I was playing shortstop. It was the first and last time Cobb spiked me. Did I take care of him, Griff?"

Whereupon the Nat's owner, took up the tale of Elberfeld vs. Cobb. "Kid ain't lying," said Griffith. "I was pitching the first day we saw Cobb in 1905. The Kid was my shortstop with the New York Highlanders. Cobb went out of his way 6 feet to spike the Kid the first time he got on base. The next time Cobb went into second, Kid was ready for him. He lifted one foot high and stopped Cobb a foot from the bag with the other. Then he gave Cobb the knee and pounded Ty's face into the dirt 15 or 20 times. That was the last time he had any trouble from Cobb."

The Kid weighed 132 pounds when he played shortstop in the American League. Around the sandlots of Cincinnati before the turn of the century, he was Nick Altrock's first catcher. He succeeded Griffith as manager of New York in 1905 after the Highlanders, on a road trip, lost 21 in a row.

But he was welcome in the Nats' camp today. The Kid is responsible for half of the Washington infield which came out of baseball schools that he ran. Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis were uncovered by Elberfeld who sold them both to the Nats' Chattanooga farm. For Travis, who today is rated a $50,000 chattel, Elberfeld received $205 from the Chattanooga Club.

Travis and Elberfeld were discussing their first meeting today. It was back in 1931, and Elberfeld, who was operating a baseball school in Atlanta, had received reports about a tall, semipro lad who lived in nearby Riverdale, Ga.

"I went out there to get Travis for my baseball school. It was the last week of the school, and it was raining every day. I never did get a chance to see Travis field, but I knew he could hit. The only fielding practice he ever got from me was in my living room on the rug. I tossed him grounders with a spin on 'em, and tried to show him how to come up with them. Joe Engel took my word for it that he was a good fielder."

In the Nats' dressing room, the Kid talked to Mike Martin, Washington trainer who has been with Griffith for 38 years. "Mike was a red-headed, freckle-faced mascot when I was with Griffith's Highlanders," recalled Elberfeld. "We adopted him and he ended up as the trainer of the club."

Those were the days when Griffith was pitching his junk stuff to great hitters like Cobb and Crawford and Burkhardt. He'd give 'em everything but a fast ball and make 'em hit it where he wanted. Griff would give me the sign and I'd stand behind second base and rob 'em. We'd have won that pennant in 1906 except for Chesbro's wild pitch in the last game of the season."

What sort of a hitter was the 132-pound Elberfeld? Mike Martin answered that one. "Tell 'em about that day against Rube Waddell, Kid.' Remember the time he held us to four hits and you got all four of 'em and beat him 3 to 2. Willie Keeler walked four times and you laid down three bunts. Tell 'em about Waddell, Kid."

"There was the champion, until Walter Johnson came into the league. I don't know about this boy Feller, but I'm betting he can't throw a fast ball like Waddell or Addie Joss. I understand they can swing the ends of their bats and get a hit off this boy Feller. If you were down on the end of the bat against those old guys you'd never get a piece of the ball. Keeler would bet .500 against today's pitching."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

The brass hats of the War Department soon will order two of the country's leading football coaches to get the blazes back to work.

The coaches are Majors Lawrence "Biff" Jones, of the University of Nebraska, and Maj. Bob Neyland, of the University of Tennessee. Both are retired and have brought tremendous renown to the colleges which now hire them. Officers in their same category are about to be called back into the service and this business of Army officers coaching outside teams is washed up until the world is at peace again. Jones and Neyland have remained on the Army's pension list while receiving (and more than earning) their top salaries as grid coaches.

CONSIDINE

Until the present emergency arose, Jones and Neyland were in the position of being able to get back into the Army simply by volunteering. In a very short time, that will be changed. They, and other officers in that category, some of them making a lot of money in important business positions, will be ordered back into uniform, at the modest prevailing war scale.

There is some debate now going on in the War Department as to what rank Jones and Neyland will receive when they report back to duty. Some Army bigwigs suggested that they come back only as majors, though their former classmates at West Point are now mostly lieutenant colonels. However, they'll probably rate that higher ranking when they return, assuming that neither resigns from the Army in the meantime.

Jones, whose Nebraska team won the Big Six Conference this year and went on to play in a thrilling Rose Bowl game, has been one of the most successful coaches in the game. His Army teams, in the late 1920's and early 1930's were great powers in football. He had no appetite for the passive life of an army officer when his tour of duty as West Point coach ended. So he retired and, from among many offers, accepted the post of head coach at Louisiana State University, then being personally run by the late Huey Long.

His battles with Long wrote a memorable page in football history. To the eternal credit of the Army and himself, he refused to be pushed around by Long—at a period in the aromatic history of Louisiana when it was extremely unhealthy to combat the Kingfish. He quit L. S. U., after a fine record and moved on to Oklahoma, where he developed a team which went on to meet Neyland's Tennessee team in the Orange Bowl. From Oklahoma, Jones moved on to Nebraska, where his club last season lost only to unbeaten Minnesota, and Stanford on New Year's Day.

As for Neyland, his record indicates that he has been the best football coach in the country for a decade. Or at least has had the best teams. He began coaching Tennessee as a hobby. It was a sideline for his duties as an Army engineer assigned to river and harbor work. When he became what might be called "too famous" one of the old militarists at the War Department had him sent to Panama for a year, and Tennessee all but folded as a grid power. But Neyland retired after a year and came back to Knoxville to take charge once again. His clubs finished the regular season in 1940 with a record of 33 straight victories.

Each coach has a crack team coming up for 1941 and is now directing spring practice.

Maj. Ralph Sasse was sent from West Point, where he coached, to Mississippi State to teach military science and tactics. But the old itch was too great to overcome. He took over the football club, too, and built up a great grid machine which leaped into prominence in the middle '30's with victories over Alabama and Army. But Sasse will not be affected by the impending War Department order, as he has resigned.

Jones will go back to field artillery and Neyland, of course, to the engineers. They now make in the region of $10,000 a year as successful coaches, plus a pension based on a percentage of their former pay as active officers. If they come back as majors they will make about half of their present football salaries.

Sharp Yawl Grabs Lead In Sail Race

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 7.—Dudley Sharp's 70-foot yawl, Gulf Stream, of Houston, Tex., took an early lead over her only rival, the 71-foot Windigo, chartered by Howard Baxter, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in the third annual Havana-Key West sailing race today.

Only the two yachts entered the race, which started off Havana's Malecon Sea Drive at 4:20 p. m. (Eastern standard time). Carried along by a strong south wind, both boats were making good time as they headed into the Gulf toward Key West. They were expected to reach Key West early tomorrow morning.

The racers were escorted by two United States Coast Guard boats, Pandora and Nemesis.

With only two starters, Gulf Stream was assured of winning the Governor of Florida trophy, donated by Gov. Spessard L. Holland for the boat running up the greatest point total in five major races this season. The Havana-Key West race is the last of the five and Gulf Stream, winner of the St. Petersburg-Havana race last weekend, already has 30 points toward the trophy. William H. Labrot's Stormy Weather of Annapolis, Md., which scored 34 points in the first four races, and Robert W. Johnson's Good News of New York, with 33, did not start the final 90-mile event.

Friends Bows To Baltimore Five, 23 to 22

Sidwell-Friends School basketers lost their third one-point decision of the season yesterday when Baltimore Friends took a 23-22 victory on the local floor.

A odd play under the winners' basket accounted for their winning margin in the last few seconds of play, Guard Price sinking a two-pointer. The basket gave him scoring honors with 11 points.

Though Armand Newmyer, its high-scoring forward, was held to four foul shots throughout, the local Friends quint managed for a 9-7 lead at the half. The loss brought its record for the year to 10 lost and 6 won.

DiMaggio's Dash To Camp Halted At 70 Miles Per

By the Associated Press

Merced, Calif., March 7.—A ticket for speeding 70 miles an hour delayed Outfielder Joe DiMaggio another 30 minutes today in his hurry-up auto trip to the New Yankees' training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla.

He was arrested by State Highway Patrolman Wayne Langston just north of Merced. The ballplayer was accompanied by his wife, Dorothy.

Police Officer James Turner, to whom DiMaggio was brought by Langston, took the ticket and told Joe he would appear in court for him. He did not have to put up bail.

DiMaggio already was late to his St. Petersburg appointment, due to contract troubles. They've been ironed out, however, to the tune of a sum in the neighborhood of $35,000.

Jake Gets Lowdown on the Higher-ups

Washington, D. C.

Dear Jake,

You must be a glutton for punishment. How can you stand it to be down here in that sizzling Florida climate when we are having such delightful weather here in Washington? Somebody's been sweeping dandruff off the clouds all day, Jake, but the air is mighty invigorating. All you've got to do is take a deep breath and you feel just like you hit the number for a quarter.

HAIGHT

I'm sitting here in front of the open fireplace in my shirt sleeves, writing this and listening to the radio birds singing to ASCAP, "You Made Me What I Am Today."

Well, Jake there isn't a whole lot of news around here. Jimmies' is still closed and all the boys and gals are counting the days until Bowie opens. Art Brown's program is still going over big at the Home For The Aged, Mike Jacobs moved into town and 8,000 paid to see Billy Conn knockout Joe Blaw from Idaho, all the baseball writers at the Nats' camp trying to squeeze news out of a wet tarpaulin and Valerie Parks (with entire New York Show) is playing at the Gayety.

Congress is making so much noise arguing over the loan-lease bill that Ferdy Walter at the Morris Plan Bank can't hear me trying to borrow fifty bucks. I can't understand all the angles on the loan-lease bill myself, Jake, but it's something like this: One guy is fighting another guy and you have a brick in your hand. One guy could win with your brick. Well you either lend him the brick and he promises to pay for it when he gets around to it or he takes the brick and promises to give it back when he's through with it or give you another brick.

Everything goes along all right for a while and some Senator gets up and says, "All-out for Britain." Don't get it wrong, Jake, it's not like the streetcar conductor saying, "All out for Florida Avenue." Avenue."

History ti being made. You know, Jake, past performances of the world. But let's skip it. And please don't get yourself all worked up, either. The Jersey mob hasn't anything to do with it. I'll try to dig up the lowdown and tell you about it when I see you.

Well, Jake, I continue to fool the Boss with my letters. He prints anything and the No. 1 copy boy (you know, Jake, sort of like the house detective) tells me the Boss has been reading my letter first and Superman second. But to tell the truth, I'm wasting my time and his space.

As I told you that day at Laurel when the old woman bought me an apple because I picked her a winner, I'm going to be a great man someday, Jake. In fact, I have named a club after myself. A fellow named Ray Benton wrote me a letter inclosing a buck and saying that he wanted to start a Walter Haight Club. He must have been a mind reader or something, because I had the same idea and, in fact, I had written a letter along the same lines and my brother-in-law was going to sign it and mail it to The Post.

Of course, I used Benton's letter, but I might as well have used mine. The boys around the office cracked plenty wise about it.

I stood it as long as I could and then I went up to Benton's apartment and dragged him down to the sports department and introduced him all around. And Jake, I'll get even with that golfer scribbler Merrell Whittlesey. When I introduced Benton that guy pops up with, "I didn't get the name. Did you say Cousin Benton?" Well, everybody laughed including Benton, but excluding me.

RAY BENTON

Anyway, I escorted Benton up to the photographic department and Hugh Miller took his picture and I'm sending one to you. I'm hoping the Boss will run it in the paper but it looks like I'm going to have to get Benton to sign an affidavit before I'm through with this thing.

(By the way, Jake, Hugh Miller's bowed tendon is coming along O.K. and we might have him ready by the second week at Bowie.)

I want you to get me some members for the Walter Haight Club. And remember, too, this ain't a racket. Everybody is eligible. Just tell them, whether they like my letters or not, to mail a dime and a self-addressed envelope to the Walter Haight Club, Washington Post. The dime goes to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund. I'll mail them a membership card which makes them eligible for my contest. Don't worry about the contest, Jake, but we'll have one and the prizes are going to be badges for Bowie and tickets to the opening ball game.

Remember, up at the start of this letter, I said that somebody was sweeping dandruff off the clouds? Well, now it looks like he's sweeping up the floor of a cotton gin.

That's all I'm going to write today, Jake, so you can take the clothespin off your nose.

As always,

POUNDS HAIGHT.

Record Set By Colosseum; Eads Injured

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 7.—Running 5½ furlongs in 1:03 4-5, only two-fifths of a second slower than the world's record, Charlton Clay's Colosseum drove to a head victory over A. H. Waterman's Mary Schulz in the featured Homestead Purse here this afternoon. Imperial Jayna, representing M. Wexler, was third, a length and a half behind. The winner, giving Jockey Conn McCreary a double, carried 104 pounds and paid $16.80 for $2. The 4-year-old daughter of Ariel clipped one-fifth of a second from the old track mark shared by Wise Bee and Mr. Sponge.

Jockey Wendell Eads, Florida's leading apprentice rider, suffered a fractured skull, fractured shoulder and serious internal injuries in a first-race spill.

Jockey Ted Atkinson, who fell in the same accident, was less seriously hurt with a possible concussion. Eads was still unconscious at University Hospital an hour and a half after the mishap.

Eads' mount, Miss Victory, appeared to stumble about 30 yards from the finish line directly in the path of Moonfull, ridden by Atkinson.

The remarkable speed exhibition in the feature purse showed once again that the local strip never was as fast at any previous meeting. Imperial Jayna, unable to win a race at Havana while running for a claiming price of $1,500, ran the first quarter in 0:21 4-5 and the half in 0:44 3-5. Aerial Bomb, the favorite, sampled this terrific pace to the stretch, where she had enough.

The world's record for this distance is held by Iron Mask, which carried 150 pounds on March 8, 1914, at Juarez, Mexico, and was timed in 1:03 2-5.

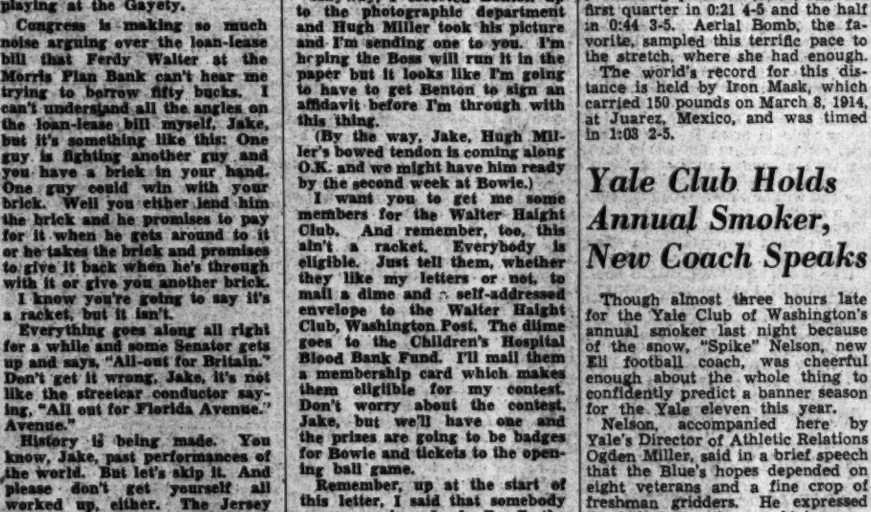

Yale Club Holds Annual Smoker, New Coach Speaks

Though almost three hours late for the Yale Club of Washington's annual smoker last night because of the snow, "Spike" Nelson, new Eli football coach, was cheerful enough about the whole thing to confidently predict a banner season for the Yale eleven this year.

Nelson, accompanied here by Yale's Director of Athletic Relations Ogden Miller, said in a brief speech that the Blue's hopes depended on eight veterans and a fine crop of freshman gridders. He expressed the belief that they could improve on a Yale grid record that has been considerably less than terrific recently.

Approximately 150 old grads turned out for the get-together, including Representative John M. Vorys, of Ohio, and numerous other celebrities.

Roanoke Five Host to Regals Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Roanoke, Va., March 7.—Roanoke's undefeated American Legion basketball team will meet the District of Columbia A. A. U. champions in a battle for regional honors and a national tournament expense allotment of approximately $500 here Sunday afternoon.

The powerful Legion team whipped the University of Virginia's State collegiate champs, 51 to 41, last night with Bob Spessard, former Washington and Lee ace, tallying 26 points. It was the second triumph of the season for the Legionnaires over Virginia, the first coming by a 1-point margin.

Regal Clothiers won the Washington A. A. U. title by downing Adam Hats last night. The Roanoke team already has made plans to go to the National A. A. U. tournament in Denver on the strength of its Virginia A. A. U. crown, but will be gunning for the District allotment in the game with the Clothiers.

Bill Harman led the Virginia scoring last night with 14 points. Before the Cavalier squad took the floor it elected Bill Preston and Albert Lowman co-captains for the 1941-42 season.

Hoya Icemen, Penn Staters Clash Tonight

A two-in-one attraction will be featured at popular prices at Riverside Stadium tonight when big-time collegiate hockey and public skating is combined on an attractive card.

Georgetown University's hockey team, which has shifted the remainder of its schedule to Riverside, plays host to Penn State's Nittany Lions at 8 o'clock. Two hours of public skating without additional charge of any kind follows the game.

The Lions boast a team that compares favorably with the best in the East. It has won three of its four starts to date, losing only to John Carroll and winning twice from Temple University and also from Carnegie Tech.

The Hoyas have shut out Temple and nosed out Lehigh, leader of the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Conference, in overtime.

The Hoyas again center their attack around Bill Deegan, a capable center, who has scored four goals in his team's two games. Bill Deegan and his brother Frank, a wingman, are numbered among Georgetown's best bets. John McQueeney, a wingman listed among the spares, is another standout.

Redland Hunt Races Today Despite Snow

Laytonsville Course Scene; Few Scratches Expected; Program Starts at 2 P. M.

Despite the heaviest snowfall of the winter, the Redland Hunt Club will conduct its annual point-to-point program today, Master of Fox Hounds Thomas T. Mott announced last night. "There has been no change in plans and the races will start promptly at 2 o'clock," said Mr. Mott. "In addition, I do not expect conditions to reduce the sizes of the fields."

The prospect of jumping their horses out of the snow did not seem to dull the enthusiasm of several of the riders contacted last night. Among them were Mrs. Frank B. McSherry and Miss Judy Johnson, both of whom have been prominent in other Redland point-to-point events. Upwards of a dozen riders walked the course yesterday in the driving snow. According to the rules, riders may walk but not bring their mounts on the course prior to the races.

Included in the group was Gerald Webb, who rode Longitude to victory last year. He is scheduled to have the mount on the same horse today. Other riders from the Middleburg section also were on the scene.

As usual, four races will be contested. Chief in interest is the Redland Bowl event in which horses must carry a minimum of 165 pounds. The other events are the Terpenning Cup pair race, the heavyweight and the gap hunters' races.

The races will start and finish on the farm of Harry Blunt, jr., in Montgomery County. It may be reached by auto to Olney, turn left and the way is posted with yellow signs to the course, which lies in the direction of Laytonsville. However, it may be reached by going to Gaithersburg and turning right to Laytonsville.

Unless snow interferes, it will be possible for spectators to see the entire course.

Stars Are Listed

The field for the Redland Bowl will include such well-known timbertoppers as Gerald Webb's Longitude, Bill Lasell's Decrescent, Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Sky Painter and Airy Spirit, T. T. Mott's Play Pal and Port Law, Nancy Hanna's Gone Away and Hazel Welsh's Windsor Boy.

Four Virginia Boxers Survive Eastern Bouts

Special Dispatch to The Post

Syracuse, N. Y., March 7.—The Orange boxing team of Syracuse led the way through the elimination rounds of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association tournament tonight as more than 2,000 fans witnessed the opening session of the eighteenth annual competition.

Six Syracuse fighters, four each from Army, Cornell, Penn State, Virginia and Coast Guard and two from Western Maryland will fight in semifinal bouts tomorrow afternoon. Syracuse and Army each placed one man in the final round in the heavyweight division. Toots Mirabito, of the Orange, and Cadet Frank Clay won their semifinal bouts which were moved up from tomorrow afternoon.

One Champion Bows

The first Dixie entrant was eliminated when Vic Fiore, cofavorite for the 120-pound crown, scored a technical knockout over Francis Thomason after 1:20 of the second round. Fiore, representing Penn State, clipped Thomason with a right hook that ended the bout after a close first round. Thomason was filling in for Joey Block, injured Cavalier star.

The first Southern point of the evening was drawn when Capt. Joe Rouse, of Western Maryland, was awarded a forfeit over the Cornell entry, Marv Mittelmark. Rouse will face Milford Fahey, champion at 120 last year, in a semifinal bout yesterday afternoon.

In the 145-pound class, Edwin Lewis, of the Green Terrors, had the courage but lacked the finesse of his conqueror, the veteran Bob Baird, of Penn State. Lewis was dumped to the canvas for a count in the first round, and went down twice in the second. He hung on during the final session to lose by a decision. Baird was penalized two ponits in each of the last two rounds for low blows, but his earlier margin gave him a close decision.

Carruth is Victor

In one of the feature bouts of the night, Johnny Carruth, clever 155-pound entry from Virginia, outclassed Cadet Rippin, of West Point, after three thrill-packed rounds. Rippin earned the margin in the first round, but Carruth used a sharp left to pile up points in the second session. A closing spurt by Carruth netted him a narrow victory.

Clarence Bachman, of Western Maryland, was the victim of a slashing two-fisted attack by Syracuse's Orlando Palipoli. Bachman was declared the loser by TKO after 1 minute of the second round. It was Palipoli's first intercollegiate victory of a three-year career.

An all-Dixie affair brought together Captain Fenton Somerville, of Virginia, and Harry Baker, of the Terrors, at 165. Somerville landed a terrific right cross to the back of Baker's head after one minute of the first round. It was the first blow landed in the fight. Baker struck his head on the floor when he fell, and it was several minutes before ringside doctors revived him.

Johnnies Win, Lose in Same Cage Outing

St. John's High won the last game of the Richard Montgomery High Sportsmanship Basketball Tournament last night at Bethesda gym, 34-32, but lost the tourney trophy to the host school because of the point system in operation.

Both the Johnnies and Rockville wound up with a minus 6 rating. Ten points were given for a victory, from which one point was subtracted for each foul committed. St. John's won two games in the two-day event, but committed 38 fouls, while Rockville was responsible for only 16 fouls as it won one game and lost another. On the rule giving the cup to the team which committed the least fouls in case of a tie, Rockville captured the title.

It was the first time in the 13-year history of the event that the loser in the final game of the meet has won the trophy.

Sherwood High girls had more success than St. John's, their 21-9 victory over Rockville giving them the championship. In the junior division Stuart Junior High broke an 8-8 deadlock at the half and went ahead to win, 28-18, behind the 12-point performance of Guard Seaton.

Any Club Suits Hank Leiber; It's Money This Time

By the Associated Press

Tucson, Ariz., March 7.—Hank Leiber, a hold-out from the Chicago Cubs, viewed with unconcern today the reported deal which would return him to the New York Giants.

"I don't care what team I play with as long as I get what I think I'm worth," the big outfielder said, adding his differences with Bill Terry, Giant manager, "weren't as bad as people believe."

"I always admired Terry as a manager. I think he is one of the smartest in the business. If I go back to the Giants, Terry and I will get along all right."

Leiber, who underwent his second tonsillectomy Monday, said he had a letter from Jim Gallagher, the Cubs' new general manager, saying the Cubs had a good chance to win "and wondered why I hadn't signed.

"That makes me laugh. What are we going to win with? We haven't strengthened any."

Baltimore Seeks Rematch of Salica And Transparenti

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, March 7 (AP).—Matchmaker Jack Laken left today for New York, where he said he would attempt to arrange a title match between Bantamweight Champion Lou Salica and Lew Transparenti, of Baltimore, who won a unanimous decision over Salica here last night in an overweight scrap.

Laken said Promoter Fred Squires, of Baltimore, instructed him to offer the champion a $5,000 guarantee, adding "Salica was very receptive last night, and it looks like the title affair will come off within the next 60 days."

Transparenti entered the ring at 124 pounds yesterday, six over the bantam limit, and Salica scaled 120.

Bay View Faces Strong Field in $50,000 Capistrano 'Cap

Mioland, 16 Others To Compete

Clear Weather and Fast Track Is Seen For Rich Event at Santa Anita Today

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 7.—It will be Bay View, Tony Pelleteri's surprise package of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, against the field tomorrow in the $50,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap.

Bay View, Mioland and 16 other candidates were named today for the event, one of the few mile and one-half jaunts for a major purse in the Nation.

There will be one more day of racing Monday, when Santa Anita expects the season's largest crowd. Upwards of 50,000 may turn out. Clear weather and a fast track, in contrast to the threatening skies for the hundred-grander last week, were promised.

Nominated in addition to Bay View and his runner-up for the hundred-grander, C. S. Howard's Mioland, were Sweepida, Gen'l Manager, Swain, Can't Wait, Wedding Call, Barrancosa, Omelet, Mount Vernon II, Chalphone, Exploded, Viscounty, Royal Crusader, Rough Pass, Tobacco Road, Bolingbroke and Mr. Grundy.

While eyes of the turf world will be on Bay View and Mioland, the long route may prove more advantageous to some glorified plater, such as Chalphone; the speedy Sweepida, provided the track is dry as predicted, or Can't Wait, another good distance runner.

The Howard Stable decided to run Mioland, despite his high weight of 130 pounds, after the 4-year-old Oregon colt had breezed a fast half mile in 48 seconds early today. Mioland picks up four pounds off his Santa Anita Handicap performance, which did not set well with his handlers.

Dear Al:

It can't be long to Bowie. The press agents have started to bang away. Here's an example of the kind of stuff you are liable to see more and more of as the days roll by: "Bowie, the youngest of Maryland's four major race tracks and which opens the Eastern racing season on April 1, is ideally located and is the hub of 2,250,000 people. All patrons of the track are within an hour's motor drive or half an hour by train out of either Baltimore or Washington. According to the 1940 census, Baltimore has a population of 859,100 and Washington 663,091, making a total of 1,522,191. Prince Georges County, in which the home of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association track is located, has a population of 89,490. Several of the surrounding counties give Anne Arundel 68,375, Montgomery 83,915 and the Southern Maryland counties of Calvert 10,484, Charles 17,612 and St. Marys 14,626. The population of Howard County is 17,175, Frederick 57,312, Washington 68,838 and Baltimore County 155,825. Fort George G. Meade, which is in Anne Arundel County, is the home of about 27,000 soldiers. Arlington County, Va., with 65,500 inhabitants, which is across the Potomac from Washington, is included in the 2,250,000 people. All indications point to one of the best spring meets ever held by the track presided over by Joseph A. Farrell. The horse population at Bowie continues to grow, with the arrival of animals from Hialeah Park and several stables that raced at Santa Anita Park. By March 15, the closing time for the four stakes, more than 800 racers will be on the grounds. That date also will mark the beginning of education of ponies from the Bahr starting gate." Sounds like a stockholder. Not to change the subject, but Jimmy Sager, Fourteenth Street and Park Road's cash and carry man, say Our Boots is a cinch to win the Kentucky Derby. I believe he might break down and play this one. BILL.

First race—RAFTER appears well placed in the opening event. Has worked well and I'm going to string along. GAMESTER has plenty of speed and promises to be a keen contender. HAZEL F. for the minor money.

Second race—MILK AND HONEY has oodles of early lick and may stay in front long enough to turn back company of this sort. BECOMLY gets a good figure and will be in the thick of the money battle. PEEP SHOW is a fair horse and may prove dangerous.

Third race—MERRY GESTURE has shown enough to warrant a top selection in an open race of this nature. Needs only the right handling. MAELINE gets a good figure and will be there or thereabouts. PARI-ERNEST should be no worse than third in this field.

Fourth race—BOILED SHIRT shapes up as the right one in this field. Comes from a good stable and is promised strong handling. ZACATINE promises to be a factor and will take it all if the top one makes mistakes. MAEGAY is not out of it.

Fifth race—ROBERT L. has the speed to defeat company of this caliber. Likes the track and conditions appear to favor him. SPEED TO SPARE will be a threat but, as usual, may stop. FAIRFLAX has been consistent and should be in the thick of contention.

Sixth race—KURDISTAN could be the right in this affair. Not the most solid horse in the world but one with a good chance of getting home on top. SICKLE BILL is good now and will be close. OUTBOARD has a chance.

Seventh race—KEY MAN has as good a chance as anything in this distance battle. May close in time to take it all. BROWN BOMB and WAUGH POP to fill out the money bracket.

Eighth race—MIGHTILY is better than generally rated and probably will be a hard horse to beat in this field. SIR REG deserves attention off that recent fine effort. CAR-ROU for the show end.

Best bet—BOILED SHIRT.

Elden Auker Beats Browns—Browns Beat Elden Auker

San Antonio, Tex., March 7.—The St. Louis Browns played a six-inning practice game today and—here's one for the books—Elden Auker was both the winning and losing pitcher.

Because the weather was cold, Manager Fred Honey had Auker pitch the first two innings for both sides. The team captained by Johnny Lucadello scored two runs in the second inning and went on to beat the Johnny Berardinos, 8 to 0.

Fritz Ostermueller and Bob Munchief also worked two innings each for both squads. The trio of pitchers gave only one hit to Berardino's team, which included the Browns' regular infield.

Arena Fight Card Set Back For Two Days

A switch from Monday to Wednesday for the boxing show featuring Tommy Forte, of Philadelphia, No. 1 world's bantamweight challenger, and Victor Corchado, Puerto Rican scrapper, at Turner's Arena was announced last night by Promoter Joe Turner.

Since both fighters had asked for a few more days to train, and since the match was not closed out until Thursday, Promoter Turner decided it would be advisable to change. Gabe Menendez was in a huddle with Turner yesterday and said it was for the best interests of all concerned to hold the fight on Wednesday.

Menendez announced he had signed up another Puerto Rican featherweight, Pedro Hernandez, to meet Johnny Marcelline, of Philadelphia, in the eight-round semiwindup. Hernandez' contract was purchased recently by Al Weill, who thinks he has the makings of a real champion in the youngster, remembered for a quick kockout over Pat Sully in his debut at the Arena recently. Hernandez has beaten among others Al Mancini, Tony Costa and Johnny Stack.

Also added to the card was a six-rounder between El Brookman, local welterweight, and El Franklin, colored protege of John Carter. Two other bouts will be added.

Menendez yesterday got firsthand information from one of his agents on the match in which Lew Transparenti, of Baltimore, upset World's Bantamweight Champion Lou Salica in Baltimore Thursday night. This same Transparenti was knocked out in two rounds a few months ago by Forte, who lost to Salica in a title bout in Philadelphia after winning from him in the first match. Forte has lost but two fights in two years of pro boxing. He is a former National Golden Gloves champion, and has a brother, Tommy, who also is a crackerjack fighter.

George Case to Receive Peddie Award as Outstanding Graduate

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hightstown, N. J., March 7.—Dr. Wilbour E. Saunders, headmaster of Peddie School, today announced that George W. Case, of Trenton, N. J., and a centerfielder for the Washington Senators, has been awarded the John D. Plant Cup for 1941. This cup is awarded annually by the faculty committee of athletics to that Peddie graduate who, during the preceding year, has been outstanding among Peddie men in athletics. Presentation of the award will be made on Friday, March 14, at the thirty-sixth annual dinner of the Peddie School New York Alumni Association.

GEORGE CASE

Case graduated from Peddie in 1936. He was captain of the basketball team, a member of the house committee, student governing body, as well as the star pitcher for Peddie's baseball team. Case's mound record came to the attention of Ira Thomas, once a star catcher in the American League and at that time a scout for Connie Mack, who thought that a prep school player who could bat and run as well as pitch was worthy of inspection by Mack.

Case Reported to Mack

Following his graduation, Case reported at Shibe Park, Philadelphia. After pitching twice in batting practice, he was given a chance to take a turn at the plate. Connie Mack, after watching him hit an infield grounder and dash for first base, then ordered that Case should bunt a couple, after which Mack told him that he would be wasting his time as a pitcher and should become an outfielder.

Soon afterward Case was signed for Albany by Joe Cambria, who later took him to York, Pa. York, however, did not support the team to Cambria's satisfaction, whereupon Case told his employer that Trenton, N. J., would be a great improvement. As a result of Case's enthusiasm, Cambria did move his club and franchise to Trenton during the 1936 season, where Case attempted to bunt 27 times and was thrown out but twice.

He signed again with Trenton in 1937 and in August was taken up by Washington, where he has remained as centerfielder. In 1939 and 1940, Case became the leading base stealer of both major leagues, stealing 51 bases in 1939 and 35 last season. Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, claims that Case is the fastest runner in the American League and that it is almost impossible to throw him out when he bunts.

Case will be the fifth recipient of the Plant Cup, which was first awarded four years ago to Lawrence M. (Larry) Kelley, Peddie 1933, Yale 1937, former captain and All-American of the Yale football team, who is now coaching football and teaching history at Peddie. The second cup was awarded to Merrill Davis, Peddie 1934, Dartmouth 1938, who was captain and end of the Dartmouth 1937 football team. In 1939 a former Peddie roommate of Case's, William M. Thompson, Peddie 1935, Syracuse 1939, received the cup in recognition of his outstanding playing as a member of the soccer and basketball teams at Syracuse. Last year's cup was awarded to Edward W. Clark, Peddie 1935, Princeton 1939, who was captain of the 1939 Princeton golf team which won the Eastern Intercollegiates.

Mehl Enters C. U. Meet Monday Night

He is Walter Mehl, national 1,500-meter champion and recent winner of the National A. A. U. mile event, held at Madison Square Garden, at which time he crossed the finish line in 4 minutes 10.9 seconds, leading such outstanding national track stars to the wire as Leslie MacMitchell, Chuck Fenske and John Munski.

The former Wisconsin University star miler, now pounding the board track for the Wisconsin National Youth Administration, added his name to the list scheduled to compete in the new Killion Memorial mile event. Heading the list of stars to appear in this event will be defending Champion Gene Venzke, former Pennsylvania University flash, who last year came through over a star-studded field, including Glenn Cunningham and Archie San Romani.

Other nationally known stars who will appear in this event include John Munski, the Missouri University star, who drew the pole position, and Luigi Beccali, 1932, 1,500-meter champion now running for the N. Y. A. C.

In addition to his victory in the National A. A. U. event, Mehl turned in an amazing exhibition to win the Millrose A. A. mile event in the fast time of 4:13.6. The Wisconsin star, running hot on the heels of Leslie MacMitchell, N. Y. U. star, was responsible for the latter turning in the record tying time of 4:07.[illegible] in the annual N. Y. A. C. games.

A heavy ticket sale is expected to continue over the weekend breaking all records for advance sale of this annual event. Tickets will remain on sale today and tomorrow at the Willard Hotel, Keystone Auto Club, A. A. A., Uline's and Catholic University. For best seats, all are advised to place orders early as possible. Tickets sell for 75 cents, $1.10 and $1.65.

New Car Sales In D. C. Mount 22% in Month

New automobile registrations in Washington totaled 2,113 in January and were 22 per cent above registrations of the same 1940 month, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday in its monthly survey.

For the Fifth District, new car registrations for the month were 22,094, or an increase of 25 per cent over the 17,660 recorded in January, 1940.

The Federal Reserve survey noted that in spite of large sales, dealers' stocks of new cars rose to a relatively high level and trade reports indicate that manufacturers have surplus stocks in warehouses.

Retail Sales Up 25%

The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday that Washington department store sales jumped 25 per cent in the week ended March 1 as compared with the corresponding week last year. In the same week the Reserve District showed a 15 per cent gain.

"These unusual stocks," the review commented, "have been purposely built up against a possible restriction of material for car building later in the year when the defense program may require materials normally consumed by automobile factories themselves."

Employment generally in the Fifth District is at the highest level in many years, and practically all experienced industrial and construction workers are being utilized, the bank stated.

The defense activity has put a premium on efficient labor, and in addition has brought many people from farms into wage ranks, the survey points out.

Washington, as usual, led the reserve district in construction during January. Building permits here totaled $6,927,000 for the month, all for private construction. Baltimore was second with $1,816,450.

Other highlights of the January survey relating to Washington were: bank debits totaled $330,742,000, or 18 per cent more than in January, 1940; department store sales were 21 per cent heavier, and retail furniture sales showed a 36 per cent gain for seven reporting stores.

Two Big Issues Are Proposed By Ohio Utility

By the Associated Press

The Ohio Power Co., Canton, Ohio, informed the Securities Commission yesterday of its intention to issue $15,000,000 of first mortgage bonds, due 1971, and 202,403 shares of cumulative preferred stock, $100 par value.

In addition to the registration statement, the company and its parent, the American Gas & Electric Co., filed applications concerning the proposed issues under the Holding Company Act.

The Ohio company said it would offer 169,403 shares of the preferred stock to holders (other than its parent) of its outstanding preferred stock on a share for share basis plus cash equal to the difference between the redemption price of the old stock and the offering price of the new stock.

The bonds and the remaining 33,000 shares of the new preferred, together with any unexchanged shares of the new stock, will be offered to the public through a group of underwriters headed by Dillon, Read & Co., New York.

The application said that American Gas & Electric would purchase not more than 1,236,549 shares of Ohio Power common stock for $6,182,745 in cash and would make a capital contribution of $1,456,936.08 in cash.

The company said that it intended to purchase from American Gas for cancellation 28,662 shares of 6 per cent preferred stock at a cost, exclusive of dividends, of $2,882,745, and will discharge $1,456,936.08 of open account indebtedness to its parent.

The company proposes also to deposit $18,634,330 with the redemption agent to cover the preferred stock exchange offer and $15,000,000 with the trustee of the mortgage securing the bonds under the indenture agreement.

The balance of the proceeds will be used for general corporate purposes. Accrued dividends on the preferred outstanding will be paid out of company funds.

'Real Income' Reported Less During Year

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—A record high in the "realized" national income but a slump in the "real income" per person during 1940 was reported today by the National Industrial Conference Board, a research organization sponsored by private industry.

According to the board's statistics, the Nation's total money payments received by individuals, mainly in the form of wages, salaries, professional fees, dividends, interest, rents and royalties, amounted to about $72,000,000,000 in 1940.

This total, said the board, was 4.9 per cent higher than in 1939 and $7,500,000,000 less than the record high of 1929.

Adjusted for changes in the cost of living, the board reported, the resulting real income of 1940 was the highest of any year in history and at least 3 to 4 per cent above any previous year.

On the other hand, it was stated, since the population of the United States rose about 10,400,000 between 1929 and 1940, last year's income per person was $545, about 17 per cent lower than in the boom year of 1929. Real income per person also was lower than in 1929, running, according to cost-of-living changes, about 2.2 per cent below that year.

Realized national income per family, last year, was figured at about $2,275, compared with $2,894 in 1929 and $3,044 in 1920. Real income per family also was lower last year than in 1929, the war year 1917, or the prewar period of 1906 to 1910.

New Offerings Of Securities Rise To $42,609,359

New York, March 7 (AP).—Borrowers began to return to the capital market this week, boosting public offerings of new securities to the highest level in four weeks.

Total earnings for the week ended yesterday were $42,609,359 compared with $9,383,000 the previous week, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

While still of modest proportions, the total indicated, underwriters said, that prospective borrowers were gaining courage after a period of inactivity caused by weakness in stock and bond markets.

Meanwhile, completion of the Georgia Power Co.'s $125,000,000 debt refunding program was effected yesterday through the private sale to 27 insurance companies of $101,600,000 of 3½ per cent bonds and negotiation of $13,500,000 of bank loans from a group of New York institutions.

A statement by Justine R. Whiting, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, which controls the Georgia Co., said the transaction, one of the largest utility refinancing programs in recent years, would reduce the Southern subsidiary's annual interest charges by around $2,350,000 and cut preferred stock dividend requirements by $274,000.

Bankers Pledge Cooperation To Defense, Close Session

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Assurance of the American Bankers Association's cooperation in distributing defense obligations to the public was given the United States Treasury today.

P. D. Houston, of Nashville, Tenn., head of the bankers' organization, uttered the pledge in an address closing the Eastern regional conference of the association.

"It is a large undertaking with many ramifications," Houston said, "and, since it is, final plans have not been completed. Officials of the Treasury have indicated to us, however, that by the time of our conference at Louisville two weeks hence, or possibly earlier, their plans will have been advanced to the point where we shall be able to formulate and announce ways in which the banks can work with the Government in its financing program.

"But I do not want to wait until then to offer our help. I do not want to let this opportunity pass to assure the Treasury of our readiness to cooperate with it and to let the bankers of the Nation know that another opportunity will soon be presented to us to again prove our devotion to the welfare of the Nation."

If England can hold out through August, Hitler can be defeated, Dr. W. Randolph Burgess, vice chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York, the Nation's second largest financial institution, said in an address at the closing luncheon.

Of inflation, Dr. Burgess said that while some is to be expected, it need not be uncontrolled. "The danger must not be ignored or underestimated, but if methods can be devised for intelligent, genuinely cooperative action by Government, business, labor and finance, there is real possibility of effective control," he said.

Mixed Trends Prevail in Quiet Stock Trade; Profit-Taking Noted on Previous Day's Rise

New York, March 7.—Stocks generally lost their dallying exuberance in today's market although few delevloped any real weakness. Failure of the list at the start to follow through on Thursday's upswing was a bit disappointing to bullish forces and many cashed in part of their profits.

Mixed trends persisted throughout the session in dealings which were well under those of the preceding session. While gains of fractions to around a point were scattered throughout the list at the close, the majority of steels, motors, aircrafts, rail and coppers finished a bit under water.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 41.2. Transfers of 351,200 shares compared with 480,000 yesterday.

A fair amount of bullish sentiment still was present in Wall Street, brokers said, despite continued apprehension over a possible nearby war shock in the Balkans, labor unsettlement in defense industries and fears forthcoming taxes may be bad news for shareholders.

Considered in the day's market budget was a further climb in retail spending throughout the country, an upturn in last week's department store sales as summarized by the Federal Reserve Board, a slight dip in the current week's automotive output due to shortages of materials, and a number of additional favorable earnings statements and dividends. An expansion of $33,000,000 in commercial loans of New York City Reserve Member Banks for the week ended Wednesday was seen as confirmation of the recovery stride.

Continued strength of commodities generally was encouraging to followers of shares. While rubber futures were a trifle reactionary, other industrial staples maintained their forward jaunt. Wheat at Chicago was up ⅞ to 1⅜ cents a bushel and corn ahead ¾ to ½. Cotton held advances of 20 to 45 cents a bale. Rail loans again rose in the bond department.

Among stocks Universal Pictures, an odd-lot issue, jumped 5 points on a 20-share turnover. Ended with modest improvement were Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, North American, Southern Pacific, J. I. Case, International Harvester, U. S. Gypsum, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, Allied Chemical and Westinghouse.

On the losing end were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Anaconda, Kennecott, General Electric and Texas Corporation.

In the Curb Aluminum of America was up 2¾. Minor gains were retained by Electric Bond & Share, American Light & Traction, Mead Johnson, Westmoreland Coal and Republic Aviation. Minus signs were attached to American Cyanamid "B," Humble Oil, Jones & Laughlin, Phoenix Securities and American Gas. Volume here approximated 66,000 shares versus 101,000 Thursday.

Spring Buying Seen Earlier Than Usual

New York, March 7 (AP).—Retail trade made its "expected" seasonal advance last week, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today in its weekly review.

"With few exceptions," said the mercantile agency, "retail sales reports were of one kind: High and going higher.

"In several lines, spring buying was found to have started earlier this year than usual. Among home furnishings, electrical refrigerators, washing machines and vacuum cleaners were outstanding in this respect, the survey stated, adding: "Retail trade this week maintained a margin of increase over last year of 7 to 12 per cent. Practically all major centers had some improvement to report, the most substantial being Southern sections of the country."

Possible Hike In Loan Rate Buoys Wheat

Chicago, March 7 (AP).—Purchases inspired by reports that the Government may increase crop loan rates, firmness in securities and other commodities and tension in the Balkans lifted wheat prices a cent or more today.

Short covering attributed to professional dealers caused an advance of as much as a cent at the opening after which the market backed down fractionally due partly to selling stimulated by receipt of more rain and snow in the Southwest. The buying move picked up momentum in the final hour, however, and wheat closed ⅞ to 1⅜ cents higher than yesterday, May 83⅜-½, July 79⅞-80.

Corn finished ⅜-½ up, May 61⅜-6¾, July 61½; oats ⅛-⅜ higher; soybeans ¼-½ up; rye ⅜-½ higher and lard 10-12 higher.

Exporters reported the United Kingdom bought 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat overnight, including 300,000 bushels for shipment from Montreal when navigation starts. Exchange of futures contracts for these sales prevented any material reaction at Winnipeg.

With farm officials conferring in efforts to arrange a compromise aid program during the coming season, many traders expressed belief certain phases of the various proposals will be outlined in tomorrow's AAA anniversary speeches. An increase in the wheat loan is expected to involve more funds than were necessary to operate this phase of the program in 1940, traders said, if the crop is larger.

Oats and ryes firmed with wheat R. O. Cromwell, crop expert, estimated winter rye production prospects at around 40,000,000 to 42,000,000 bushels compared with 40,000,000 harvested last year. Soybeans rose about a cent at one time to the best level of the month but reacted on profit taking.

Slab Zinc Supply At Lowest Level In Modern Times

New York, March 7 (AP).—Stocks of slab zinc in the hands of primary producers fell to the lowest level in modern times at the end of February despite rigid voluntary rationing of supplies by the industry, figures released by the American Zinc Institute disclosed today.

The total on February 28 of only 4,962 tons was equal to around three days' requirements at the current rate of shipments. This compared with 8,768 tons held at the end of January and 65,869 at the end of February, 1940.

Statisticians delved back to 1912 to find comparatively low stocks. At the end of 1912, the United States Bureau of Mines reported, 4,522 tons were on hand.

February production dropped to 55,414 tons from 59,156 in January but was moderately ahead of 53,367 in February last year.

The effect of rationing supplies was seen in a decline in shipments to 59,220 tons from 63,272 in January. In February a year ago 51,050 tons were delivered to consumers.

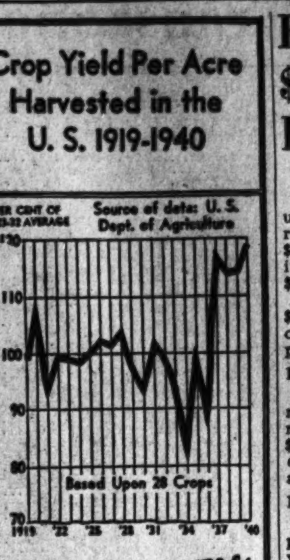

Average Bond Price Declines to $927.20

New York, March 7 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today reported the average price of the 1,292 bond issues listed on February 28 declined to $927.20 per $1,000 bond from $930.50 for the same number of issues on January 31.

Total market value dipped to $50,277,456,796 from $50,374,446,095. Par value, however, was a trifle higher at $54,225,045,912, compared with $54,139,182,757 a month earlier.

Am. Smelting Expands Gen. Cable Holdings

New York, March 7 (AP).—American Smelting & Refining Co. has purchased about 16,000 shares of General Cable Corp. 7 per cent cumulative prefered stock, $100 par, from British interests, it was disclosed today. This brought total American Smelting holdings of the Cable Company's preferred to around 28,320 shares, or roughly 19 per cent of the 150,000 shares outstanding.

Heavy Buying Sends Cotton To New Highs

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Buying orders flooded the cotton futures market and lifted prices of distant deliveries to new tops for the season today on trade reports from Washington hinting at the possibility the Government loan on the staple might be raised. The final range was up 4 to 9 points.

Demand was further prodded by news of further heavy turnover in cotton textiles in wholesale markets.

Brokers spoke of the possibility of a compromise legislative plan whereby cotton loan rates would be based as high as 75 per cent of parity or around 12 cents a pound. This would compare with the present loan of around 8-9 cents.

From the Worth Street cloth market came reports a weekend buying swell had lifted turnover of print cloths and similar items to around 25,000,000 yards. Prices, best since the 1937 highs, were up on the average of ⅛ cent a yard. A large part of the goods, it was believed, was headed for inventories in anticipation of huge Government buying.

Exports Thursday 12,395 bales; season so far 769,253. Port receipts 19,755. Port stocks 3,463,142.

New Orleans Cotton

New Orleans, March 7 (AP).—Distant positions attained new seasonal highs in cotton futures here again today and trading was the most active in months. Washington reports indicating a possibility of a 12-cent loan were responsible for the rise. The market closed steady 2 to 11 points net higher.

London Stocks

London, March 7 (AP).—A rise in the British war loan 3½s to the highest price since 1937 helped steady the balance of the securities market today.

Advances among government issues ranged to 1/16 of a point. Strength grew out of the reinvestment of funds resulting from the recent requisitioning of India stocks.

Other groups moved at a slower rate, largely because of the ominous trend of events in the Balkans.

Dollar securities, however, attracted modest attention, notably International Nickel. Demand coincided with United States reports of a shortage of nickel for defense purposes, most of which comes from International Nickel mines in Canada.

R. A. F. Raids Virtually Close The Kiel Canal

By the Associated Press

London, March 7.—British airmen sank a 2,500-ton German supply ship and blasted at the Dutch naval harbor of Den Helder today in a renewal of the North Sea thrusts which the air ministry said already have virtually crippled Germany's Kiel Canal.

The ship was sunk by a bomber of the coastal command attacking Den Helder—Dutch naval base and guardian of the Great Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee) dike—and a German-occupied airdrome at Ockenburg.

A Canadian sergeant, credited with sinking the supply ship, said his plane made a direct hit on the stern with the first heavy bomb.

After a great explosion, he said, the ship went down as "clouds of smoke and steam rolled over her."

His bomber then went on to drop its remaining load on the dockyards at Den Helder, where it was reported a considerable amount of shipping lay.

At Ockenburg, a dense cloud of oil smoke was said to have enveloped the main hangar after it was hit directly by a salvo of bombs.

"None of our aircraft is missing from this operation," said the communique on today's raid.

The 1,375-ton British destroyer Dainty has been sunk, the admiralty said, without disclosing details. The ship, normally carrying a complement of 145 men, was one of the Defender class laid down in 1930.

Choking of the Kiel Canal, Germany's famous short cut from the Baltic to the North Sea, to all but the smallest ships was credited by the air ministry's news service to minelaying by the Royal Air Force and fleet air arm.

Among the more than 100 Axis ships said to have been lost in less than 10 per cent of the aerial-mined areas one was an ore-laden freighter which went down in the Kiel Channel last December.

Subsequent reconnaissance flights, the news service continued, established that the wreckage had blocked traffic to all but the smallest ships.

Must Take Long Way

The canal, connecting Germany's fine northwestern harbor of Kiel with the North Sea, was built prior to the World War and is considered one of the finest in the world. About 53 miles long it permitted deep-draft vessels to avoid the circuitous route around Denmark and through the Kattegat and Skagerrak, also presumably mined by the British, into the North Sea.

Other activities reported on the British military front were:

A German Heinkel 111 plane, attacking a British convoy in the North Sea early today, was shot down in flames by the British patrol vessel Guillemot, the admiralty reported.

A Dornier bomber was shot down into the sea by machine-gunfire off the Norfolk coast.

Single German aircraft were reported active over England and northeast Scotland. A number of persons were killed at one point in the Midlands, but casualties and damage generally were said to be light.

$100,000 Bioff Check Figures In SchenckCase

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Company financial transactions involving Joseph M. Schenck, movie executive, and Willie Bioff, theatrical union representative who served a jail term for pandering, were described today in Schenck's trial on income tax evasion charges.

Called as a Government witness in Federal Court, John B. Codd, comptroller of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, of which Schenck is board chairman, testified that on June 23, 1937, at Schenck's direction, he did this:

Drew a check for $5,000 signed by Schenck and payable to Arthur W. Stebbins, his nephew; drew up a note for $95,000 indorsed by Schenck and signed by Stebbins, which was deposited with the Bank of America, Los Angeles branch; executed a note for $100,000, payable to Stebbins and signed by Bioff, and drew a check for $100,000 payable to Bioff and signed by Stebbins.

The following day, the witness went on, Schenck paid out to the Bank of America $100,000 in currency, which Codd said represented a return on a loan negotiated by Schenck June 16 or 17.

Under questioning by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Mathias F. Correa, Codd replied that he did not know, and his records did not show, whence the money came, although the records indicated that the $100,000 had not been withdrawn from any of Schenck's bank accounts and had not come from any of his reported investments.

Bioff, Western representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators (A. F. L.) last year was sent to jail in Illinois on an old pandering charge.

Earlier Codd testified that at the suggestion of Schenck, he arranged a $15,000 loan for Roland West, actor-director, and that West used the loan to purchase from Schenck stock in an Agua Caliente, Mexico, hotel company.

Codd was a Government witness in the trial of the movie producer who is charged with evading $412,000 in income tax payments in 1935-36-37. Joseph H. Moskowitz, bookkeeper-talent scout, is a codefendant.

The Government contends that Schenck made the sale, together with another one, in order to claim $275,000 in stock losses for 1935. Harold Corbin, defense counsel, conceded yesterday that the sales were made for tax deduction purposes but claimed they were legal and proper.

Carol, Magda Had False Brazil Visas, Spanish Report

Seville, Spain, March 7 (AP).—Former King Carol of Rumania and his companion, Mme. Magda Lupescu, used false Brazilian passports to cross the border into Portugal at 6:45 p. m. Monday, 15 minutes before the frontiers were closed in an attempt to halt them, police disclosed tonight.

The Spanish press reported that Mme. Lupescu herself engineered the escape, even managing to save the valuable art collection which Carol had brought from Rumania. The pictures were mysteriously shipped ahead, they said.

Reports from Lisbon said Carol and Mme. Lupescu had established residence in a modest chalet there and that they had received permission to remain in Portugal for some time.

Blozis Aims for New Record

Georgetown Ace Deprived Of Last Feat

Mark Last Week Disallowed; Meet Winds Up New York Indoor Competition

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Al Blozis, barred by a technicality from already holding the indoor world record for the shot put, will try to make it official at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night when he competes in the K. of C. meet that winds up New York's winter track and field competition.

The 245-pound Georgetown U. junior heaved the shot 56 feet 6 inches a week ago, which is 9¼ inches better than his listed indoor mark. But he used the regular outdoor shot, instead of the leather-covered ball which must be employed to gain A. A. U. sanction, and therefore his great heave merely will be listed among the "noteworthy performances."

Blozis Mark Predicted

Meet Director Frank Brennan predicts Blozis will do better than 57 feet this time, with the regulation shot, and thus will end all argument. Physically Al is quite capable of such a performance. The only visible drawback is that Blozis himself admits he tightens up when he is making a definite try for a record, and does his best work when he's relaxed.

By an odd coincidence the two most likely record-busters in the Casey meet are the athletes least likely to be pressed by their rivals. Even a mediocre shot put by Blozis can top most any other man's best by three feet. And Greg Rice, who has won eight straight races at two and three miles this winter, has done so by margins of as much as 160 yards, or a full lap on the Garden track.

Mellendeck May Get Outfield Post

Harris has showed a definite preference for two of them—Joe Beck, the right-hander from Orlando, and Sam Cunningham, big left-hander from Charlotte. Rated in the second flight are Bill Zinser, Southpaw Bill Kennedy and Alex Zukowski.

Still a mystery in the Nats' camp is the whereabouts of Alex Carrasquel, who has been lost, strayed but scarcely stolen somewhere between here and Venezuela . . . The latest fair-haired lad among the Nats' rookie crop of pitchers is Joe Beck, whom Harris believes can't miss as a big leaguer . . . but he didn't say when . . . FLASH: George Case has the best throwing arm among the Nats' outfielders . . . He threw a No. 2 iron to the edge of the green after dubbing a shot on the fourth hole today . . . Buddy Lewis is finding it hard to adjust his throwing arm at third base after a year in the outfield . . . The Nats are getting clothes conscious . . . There are more ice cream and pastel shades of ensembles in camp this year than in any four previous seasons.

Phleps Defeats Baltimore Team

Phelps Vocational School had to go into an overtime period in downing Dunbar High School of Baltimore, 54 to 50, yesterday on the Brown Junior High floor.

The visitors held a 26-to-15 margin at intermission.

Ellis Estes and Alonzo Harris were high for Phelps, with 22 and 12 points, respectively.

Eagles Lose To River Vale Stickmen, 2-1

along, glanced off his stick and went into the second story of the net. You might hear otherwise, but I call 'em as I see 'em.

But I like this hockey. At the football games they only feed the writers once. At hockey they have two intermissions and we got sandwiches the first time and desert the second. Good-time football, better-time hockey.

Little Action to Start

The first ten minutes produced little more than some fancy skating. Paul Lessard, River Vale's tall goalie, made a pair of saves during this interval, but play was confined mostly to haphazard passing on both sides. It was not until after four minutes that the Skeeters got a shot at the Eagles' goal. Eddie Tobin, of the Skeeters, went to the cooler for two minutes midway of the period, but the Eagles were unable to take advantage. With a minute to go, Eddie May took a pass from Percy Nichols and sent the puck into pay territory to make the score 1-0, River Vale.

The Eagles carried the fight to the New Jersey club in the second period but were unable to get the puck past Goalie Lessard. He made more saves than the Salvation Army as the Eagles bombarded him with sticks and skates.

Action unusually tame during the first period, gained momentum as the game progressed and Paul Courteau, Eagles, and Butch Marchand, Skeeters, were jailed for 2 minutes for roughing. The Skeeters stretched their lead to 2-0 after 14 minutes and 56 seconds on a lucky goal. In a scramble in front of the Eagles' goal, the puck struck the blade of a stick being swung in self-defense by a Skeeter and it caromed into the upper corner of the net much to the disgust of Goalie Gordie Hemming and the Eagle rooters. The goal was credited to Dan Grivel on assists from May and Tobin. But you can't prove it by me.

Skeeters Outplayed

The Eagles played the Skeeters right off their skates in the third period but Goalie Lessard stood like the Rock of Ages between the league leaders and a score for 9 minutes and 6 seconds. At this point, Gordon Pranschke found himself clear in front of the Skeeters' goal and hammered the puck into the net. Courteau and Burrage are alleged to have aided him. The score was 2-1, River Vale. The Eagles continued to dominate action and swarmed around the visitors' goal like so many flies but Goalie Lessard shooed them away from the sugar. Eagles' fans shook their cowbells and pleaded for the puck to get home but to no vail.

Soose Beats Vigh; Abrams Whips Welch

a two-fisted attack, that bothered Billy considerably, Soose was as good on defense as he was on attack. In close he kept Vigh tied up beautifully. At long range he had the advantage in reach, and when Vigh would try to overcome that with a bull-like rush, Soose picked off most of his punches on gloves and arms.

In the dressing room Vigh confessed he'd fought in a daze from the first 30 seconds when Soose dropped him and then had him reeling against the ropes, until they were into the eleventh round.

"I was fighting strictly by instinct," said Ernie.

Soose credited Vigh's ability to take a punch with the fact he didn't use his right hand more. He thought the young Newburgher had fought just as well as in their last meeting, but this time Billy himself was a bit better prepared.

George Abrams Wins

In tonight's eight-round semifinal, before a crowd of better than 12,000, Georgie Abrams' superior ring generalship and wider experience carried him to the decision over young Coley Welch, of Portland, Me.

Abrams, from Washington, D. C., was cut over hte left eye in the second round, but managed to keep the eye pretty well protected most of the rest of the way as he scored heavily in close. Abrams weighed 160½; Welch, 159¾.

Blozis, Kehoe Split Honors In Md. Games

beat Maryland's highly touted Sterling Kehoe, also a frosh, to the tape in the A. A. U. 1,000-yard handicap. Araujo, one of the many brilliant yearling track men Coach Hap Hardell has under cover at the Hilltop, won in 2:16.6. Third was P. O. O'Donnell, another Georgetown freshman. Araujo operated from a 15-yard handicap, Kehoe from 27, and O'Donnell, who was the prerace favorite, from 10.

The rampant Hoyas added another record in the 880-yard collegiate run, with Ken Lyden showing his heels to a strong field in 1:58.9, breaking the meet mark of 1:59.4, established last year by Vinnie Braun, Georgetown. Charley Williams, Georgetown, was second, and Randall, Maryland, third. A North Carolina student, Henry Branch, finished fourth.

Ed Barham brought McKinley High additional honors by winning the scholastic high jump with a leap of 6 feet, but was considerably below the meet record figure of 6.1⅞ with which he tied Dick Alexander, West Nottingham Academy, for the championship last year.

A slight upset occurred in the A. A. U. pole vault when Dick Ganslen, former Columbia University star, beat World's Record Holder Earl Meadows with a top effort of 14 feet for a new South Atlantic mark. The record was only 12 feet and was made last year by Howard Jensen, who failed even to place tonight. Meadows was second, with M. Crawford, William and Mary, a surprising third and Jim Lloyd, North Carolina, and Dave Wiley, Georgetown, tied for fourth.

Misses World Mark

After Meadows went out at 14 feet, Ganslen failed in his try to lower the world's indoor record of 14 feet 7¼ inches.

Tommy Fields executed an unprecedented stunt by winning two mile races with the same run. Meet officials, in order to expedite the program because of the bad weather conditions, staged the Governor's mile and the Collegiate mile as one race. Fields' time of 4:24.1 broke his own meet mark of 4:30.2, set last year.

Fields easily beat Jack Milne, the crack North Carolina freshman star and persistent conqueror of Jim's brother, Sterling, to score his double triumph. Third in the Governor's mile portion was Jack Morgan, Penn A. C.

McCluskey withdrew from the Governor's mile on the heels of his close defeat by Don Lash, the Indiana motorcycle cop, who came from behind to beat the national 2-mile steeplechase king in the A. A. U. 2-mile event.

Jack Doolan, Georgetown's former national interscholastic champion, smashed the 70-yard sprint record for the second time in two years. This time the Hoyas' football halfback ace breezed the distance in 7.1 seconds. In winning the collegiate 70 last year he posted a 7.3-second performance to break the A. A. U. record for that race. Second to Doolan in tonight's race was Maryland's Louis Chacas. The record of 7.3 seconds that Doolan was shattering belonged to another Hoya, George Bogan, who hung it up last year.

As a nightcap the Hoyas won one of the three 1-mile relay races which closed the program. The Hilltop varsity team walked away with the collegiate classified group after its frosh team was upset by Penn A. C. in the A. A. U. classified events.

Catholic University, a post entry, won its second relay victory of the evening by scoring in its section of the collegiate classifieds. The Cards' tie was 3:35.2.

The team was composed of Johnny Weschler, Johnny Doyle, Charlie O'Keefe and Jim Malaney. That made it a "double" for O'Keefe and Weschler who were members of the other winning C. U. relay outfit. Second to the Cards was West Chester Teachers and third was Washington and Lee.

Brewers Face Shake-up Tomorrow

A drastic shake-up which may affect some of the American Basketball League's highest-salaried stars may be brought about in the event the Washington Brewers fail to snap out of their slump when they entertain the world champion Philadelphia Sphas at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night at 8:45 o'clock.

Coach Mack Posnack was authority for this announcement yesterday as he looked ahead to this all-important test.

Owner Chris Heurich, jr., of the Brewers, returns from a vacation of several weeks in Florida today and will go in conference with Posnack upon his return.

The Brewers, who have been nosed out of their last four starts by narrow margins, recently lost two close starts on consecutive nights to the Sphas.

"It's true we've lost by close scores and have had some tough breaks," Posnack conceded yesterday, "but the open season for alibis has ended and it's results they pay off on. I have been reluctant to act in several cases, because I know the players I have in mind are loyal and capable. Some of them must start producing in a hurry, however, or changese will be made."

One of the players who has tened to add, is Ben Goldfadden, weathered every test, Posnack has former George Washington University star who has played every position on the floor and now is playing a fine center.

Grin and Bear It

Realism—even to the point of seeing to it that the acoustics are faulty from a radio point of view—is a feature of C. B. S.'s new quiz show, "No Politics," which you hear over WJSV every Saturday at 1:30 p. m.

The program, in which four Congressmen are put through their mental paces by Columnist Ernest Lindley, is conducted with mock formality, closely patterned after parliamentary procedure in the House of Representatives. Lindley, complete with gavel, enacts the part of the "speaker." He outlines "the order of business of the day." He "recognizes" the various "gentlemen from such and such a State." Announcer Hugh Conover is the "clerk" and his language, too, follows the parliamentary pattern. When a question is missed, for example, "Speaker" Lindley intones

"I hereby introduce a bill, H. R. 76, to appropriate $5 to be mailed to Miss So-and-So, who sent it in. All in favor say aye, etc."

And the similarity to congressional conditions extends also to the accoustics. Instead of its being put on from one of WJSV's accoustically perfect studios, it's produced in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel, which has marble pillars and high ceilings, the idea being that the sounds therefrom would more nearly approximate the echoing sounds you'd get from the halls of Congress itself.

You're invited to attend one of the sessions and see and hear for yourself.

Contract Bridge

Sitting North, you hold these cards:

♠ A J 9 8 5
♡ J 3
◇ A Q 4 3
♣ 10 2

The bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you say?

Answer

Pass. With a minimum opening bid opposite a hand which originally passed, you should not rebid, even though you hold a five-card suit and dislike hearts. There is a good chance that partner has a five-card or longer heart suit and you may make the contract. If you go to two spades, partner may take you higher, which you cannot stand.

Symphony Drive Shows Progress

Only $15,000 remains to be raised to insure the continuance of the National Symphony Orchestra next season, it was announced at a meeting of the Orchestra Association's board of directors in the Carlton Hotel Thursday.

Because of this encouraging report, a meeting of the heads of the nine committees that were engaged in the orchestra's recent sustaining fund campaign was called for next Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock in the Carlton. At that time reports on the progress of postcampaign work will be heard, and the best means for raising the balance of the $15,000 will be discussed.

Plan Offered For Prevention Of Mergers

Federal prohibition of large corporate mergers unless they are "in the public interest" was proposed to the temporary national economic committee yesterday by a high official of the Treasury Department.

Joseph J. O'Connell, special assistant to the general counsel of the Treasury and the department's representative on the TNEC, described his plan as a "technique to prevent mergers before they take place."

He also proposed Federal registration and full publicity for all trade associations as a means of facilitating enforcement of the laws against restraint of interstate commerce.

O'Connell declared that he was not speaking for the Treasury Department, but he pointed out that the ground he covered was contained in a monograph (not yet released) prepared in the Treasury for the TNEC, under direction first of the late general counsel, Herman Oliphant, and, subsequently, of Milton Handler, special assistant to the general counsel.

The merger that created the United States Steel Corporation, O'Connell told the committee, was "not to promote efficiency or reduce costs, but for promoters' profits and the reduction of competition." On a standard of public interest, he said, "that merger would never have been permitted."

Authority for Tribunal

O'Connell said that his proposal envisioned giving an administrative tribunal of the Federal Government "authority to forbid teh acquisition of assets and property of competing corporations" of perhaps $5,000,000 or more, "unless it appear that the purpose of such consolidation would be desirable" within a set of standards established by Congress.

"In the past, control has been largely theoretical," O'Connell commented.

Publications of the actions of trade associations, O'Connell predicted, would mean that business agreements would become "open covenants openly arrived at."

Legion Post Donates $301 To Blood Bank

A check for $301.79 was received by The Washington Post yesterday from Washington Gas Light Co. Post, No. 44, American Legion, for the Children's Hospital Blood and Serum Bank.

With more than a score of American Legion groups participating in the third annual blood bank drive, it was the largest amount received from any of them to date. However, at least ten have not yet held their scheduled benefit parties and proceeds still remain to be received from several whose benefits have been given.

Last year the gas company's Legion post raised $225 for the hospital "bank."

Members of the committee which arranged the party, held at the company's Tenth Street offices February 25, were W. H. Gill, B. K. Slaughter, James E. Taylor, Manuel Garrett, Earl Brooke, Ray Holden and J. Thomas Onley, chairman. George E. Evenshaw is post commander.

Principal benefit parties held last night were those of two other Legion groups, the Second Division Post and its auxiliary unit and the James Reese Europe auxiliary unit. The former, with the Holy Name Society of St. Martin's Parish cooperating, was held at the St. Martin's Club.

The James Reese Europe party was held at Crystal Caverns, Eleventh and U Streets Northwest.

Four Professors Will Retire At Richmond U.

Richmond, Va., March 7 (AP).—Dr. F. W. Boatwright, president of the University of Richmond, has announced the retirement of four university professors and the appointment of two others as department heads.

The retiring professors are Dr. R. E. Gaines, professor of mathematics for 51 years; Dr. S. C. Mitchell, professor of history for 46 years; Dr. William A. Harris, professor of Greek and Latin for 40 years, and Dr. Garnett Ryland, professor of chemistry for 24 years.

They will be placed on the retired list at the close of the present session under a new plan which retires professors at the age of 70. Dr. Ryland will be continued next year on a full-time basis, however, and Drs. Mitchell and Gaines will teach a part-time load.

Dr. Charles H. Wheeler, associate professor of mathematics since 1828, will become head of the department, and Dr. Ralph C. McDanel, member of the history faculty since 1926, will succeed Dr. Mitchell as head of the department of history and political science.

COMMISSIONER ISSUES PROCLAMATION — Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen (left) reads a proclamation announcing Washington Naval Reserve Week, March 10-16, to Lyle O'Rourke (center), chairman of the national defense committee of the Junior Board of Commerce, and Commander Arthur B. McCrary, U. S. N., director of the Naval Reserve for the Washington area

The District Commissioners yesterday proclaimed the week of March 10-16 as "Washington Naval Reserve Week" and complimented the local Junior Board of Commerce "on its interest and for the service it is rendering in making this week possible."

The proclamation, which was presented to Commander Arthur B. McCrary, U. S. N., director of the Naval Reserve for the Washington Area, and Lyle O'Rourke, chairman of the national defense committee of the Junior Board, by Commissioner Hazen, reminded local residents that Washington has a Reserve battalion consisting of three divisions. One of the divisions "is already at sea serving the country," the proclamation stated.

The two remaining divisions are awaiting their call to service.

Admiral George Pettengill, U. S. N., has arranged to have guns, gas masks, diving gear, navigation and other equipment on display in the Naval Reserve Armory, Eleventh and M Streets Southeast, from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. each day of the week. At 8 p. m. each evening drills will be conducted.

Voice From Coffin; 'Is It Still Raining?' It's Fatal Question

Copyright by New York Times

Barcelona, Spain, March 7.—The undertaker of a small village outside this town ordered a coffin from the city which was being transported on the roof of the regular postal bus to its destination. Since the bus was full, one of the passengers climbed to the roof and shortly afterwards when it began to rain lifted the lid of the coffin and got inside.

At one of the next stops two more passengers also climbed to the roof. Shortly afterward the occupant of the coffin, hearing conversation, outside, lifted the lid and asked: "Is it still raining?"

Terrified, the other two roof passengers jumped, one being killed outright and the other seriously injured. Pending police investigation, the "corpse" is being held.

4 Killers Hang Without Benefit Of Microphone

By the Associated Press

Columbia, La., March 7.—Louisiana executed four Arkansas killers today shortly after their requested "death row" radio broadcast warning against crime was banned in a last-minute move by authorities.

Denied the privilege of personally broadcasting prepared speeches from microphones set up in their cells, the condemned men, one by one, trudged the 13 steps up the scaffold and stoically dropped to their deaths within two hours.

The final statements, in which they told others to profit by their mistakes, were read, nevertheless, over the air from the jail by an announcer for station KMLB of Monroe as the four men awaited their turns on the gallows.

Two of the condemned men professed religion and sought repentance in their last words. All bade relatives farewell or warned that "crime doesn't pay." The broadcast arrangements were interrupted by Attorney General Eugene Stanley after a conference with Gov. Sam H. Jones. Stanley warned the broadcast would be illegal and it was called off.

Students Hostages

The hanged men were part of a band of six of the convicts. They were convicted of killing Frank Gartman, Columbia posseman, after terrorizing north Louisiana before they were surrounded. Two convicts were slain in the hunt. Three high school student hostages were freed when the four were captured.

William Meharg, 25, first to make the death plunge, died at 12:09 p. m., Central standard time. He was denied a final request to broadcast by harmonica the song, "If I Could Hear My Mother Pray Again."

Floyd Boyce, 29, who said "I know I have done wrong, but I have confessed my sins to God and I know that I am saved from hell," died at 12:39 p. m.

"Let's Get This Over With"

William Heard, 43, died at 1:13 p. m., his final message being "I would like to tell all the youngsters and old-timers, too, that crime does not pay. There is no such thing as easy money."

"Not much a fellow can say at a time like this. . . . May God bless my dear wife and little son" was the final message of William Landers, 39, who was pronounced dead at 1:57 p. m. He told his executioner "Come on, let's get this over with" as he went to the gallows.

Grand Jury Indicts Cvek for Murder

New York, March 7 (AP).—George Joseph Cvek, 23-year-old hitchhiking vagabond, was indicted today for first-degre murder by the Bronx County grand jury which accused him of strangling Mrs. Catherine G. Pappas, young Bronx housewife, a month ago.

Cvek has confessed the killing, said Bronx County District Attorney Samuel J. Foley, climaxing a career in which he assertedly attacked and robbed more than a score of women in Eastern cities after obtaining entrance to their homes under the guise of being a friend of their husbands.

Gestapo Helps To Rule Italy, Town Hall Told

The Italians have had to resort to rationing spaghetti.

This was part of an address, overtoned with optimism, given to the Washington Town Hall at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday by Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, French newspaper woman.

Rationing, said Mme. Tabouis, "is nearly unbearable in Italy. Coffee and other imported foods were very difficult to get in Italy before the war. Now they are not even obtainable for medical use."

The price of butter is too high for most people there and taxes are up. Unemployment is growing, despite the war. Prices are rising in Italy and salaries have not increased, she said.

Gestapo in Italy

"All this shows how little Italy can actually assist the German war effort and this is why the Nazis now find it necessary to maintain an increasing occupational force. Actually, the German Gestapo has completely matched the domestic OVRA, the Italian police, who now play only a minor role," she asserted.

Over 300,000 Italian peasants are in Germany against their will, replacing the German workers who are at war, she said. "These Italians live miserably and part of their wages are sent back to Italy to maintain their families," Mme. Tabouis said.

She expressed certainty of ultimate victory for Great Britain.

"It is true today that Germany has 80,000,000 true Aryans at her disposal. But effectively to dominate Europe, to get the fruits of his war, the Fuehrer must have to maintain a constant reign of terror which would mean perpetual mobilization of all German troops," she stated.

3 to Guard 1 Frenchman

"For instance, today there are many German troops in France. But if the Fuehrer suddenly decided to become stricter with the French population and to impose upon them obligations which really go against their hearts and their interests, then he would actually have to have three Germans to guard one Frenchman's actions," she said.

Among reasons given for her disbelief in German victory was the Nazi government's incapability "of collaborating with any states, even with its own allies."

She referred to the words of a young German storm trooper as summing up "the Nazi state of mind very well." Speaking to some German residents of Rotterdam, this trooper was quoted by Mme. Tabouis as saying:

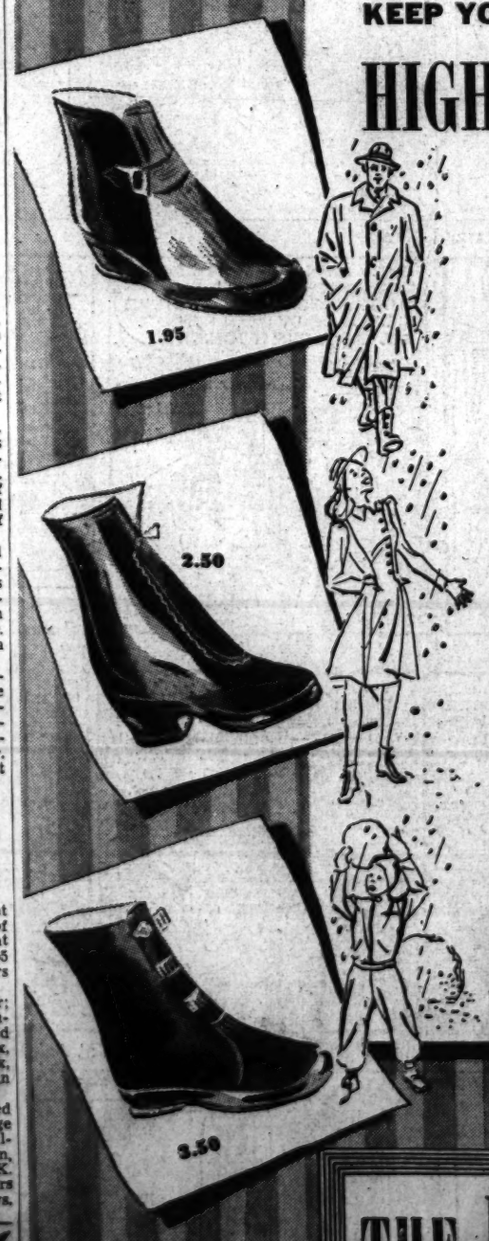

"'The revolution gripping the world today cannot be halted. The hour has come when all the peoples of the world have to make clear their attitude toward this revolution. Those who say 'yes' will be our friends. Those saying 'no' have doomed themselves to annihilation.'"

Mme. Tabouis was the former foreign editor of L'Oeuvre.
